It was proved that, though resp. received the profits of the business, he did not manage it, but left it in charge of a manager, to whom he had given express instructions not to allow prostitutes to assemble on the premises. Resp. only visited the premises once or twice a week. & there was no evidence that any offence had been committed in his presence or with his knowledge:—Held: having delegated all his authority to the manager & become a mere absentee, he was responsible for the acts of the manager, & was liable to conviction.—*ALLEN v. —A person on board one of His Majesty's ships, which was then in commission & lying in the tidal waters of the Firth of Forth above the Forth

Bridge, was alleged to have committed larceny as a clerk or servant to the Navy, Army & Air Force Institutes. He was placed under arrest by an executive officer of the ship, & some days later, by which time the vessel had arrived in Torbay, he was apprehended by the Devon police & charged before the justices, who committed him for trial at the Devon quarter sessions. The indictment charged an offence contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 17 (1) (a), committed on the high seas. Prisoner was arraigned & pleaded not guilty & a jury was impanelled, but quarter sessions declined to proceed with the indictment upon the ground that Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 115, which was said to give them jurisdiction, did not extend to offences committed in estuaries or rivers in Scotland, & that the offence charged was properly triable only by the Scottish cts.:—Held: quarter sessions had jurisdiction to try the indictment inasmuch as it alleged an offence which, by virtue of Naval Discipline Act, 1866 (c. 109), was committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, & therefore, being an offence mentioned in Larceny Act, 1861, it was triable, under sect. 115 of that Act, in the county where the offender was apprehended.—*R. v. 2204a. ——— Wrong statute inserted—Later statute in similar words.—The accused, who was a trustee under a will, was charged with having in Mar. 1916, fraudulently converted to his own use certain shares deposited with him by a co-trustee. In an affidavit filed by the accused in defence to proceedings for an account commenced against him by the co-trustee in the Ch. Div., the accused swore that he had, with the approval of his co-trustee, invested the capital in his own business. Subsequently, in his preliminary examination in bkpcy., he made admissions to the Official Receiver in regard to the disposition of the capital by him. He was indicted for fraudulent conversion as a trustee under Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 21, but the judge, on his notice being brought to the fact that that Act was not in force at the time when the offence was alleged to have been committed, allowed the indictment to be amended by the substitution of Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 80, for the later statute. The two statutes define the offence in almost precisely the same words:—Held: (1) the indictment was defective within Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), by reason of the wrong statute having been inserted, but in view of the fact that the offence under the earlier Act was defined in almost the same words as those used in the later Act, applt. could not have been prejudiced by the amendment, nor could injustice have been done to any defence that he might have had. The amendment was, therefore, rightly allowed; (2) the accused was not protected from prosecution by Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 85, either in regard to acts disclosed by his affidavit or in regard to acts disclosed by his preliminary examination in bkpcy., as such disclosures were not “in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law”; (3) the admissions in the preliminary examination in bkpcy. were not admissions made “in any compulsory examination or deposition before any ct. on the hearing of any matter in bkpcy.” & could, therefore, be given in evidence at the trial without infringing Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 43 (3).—R. v. TUTTLE (1929), 140 L. T. 701; 45 T. L. R. 357; 21 Cr. App. Rep. 85, C. C. A.

2219a. ———.]—Applt. was accused of having obtained sums of money by way of deposit from persons, who desired to be employed as managers of public-houses, by representing to them that he would appoint them to those positions. The indictment contained eighteen counts, relating to nine distinct offences, which were charged alternatively as obtaining sums of money by false pretences, & as larceny by a trick of the same sums. In every one of the counts relating to false pretences, the indictment as originally framed ran: “by falsely pretending that he would appoint . . . as manager.” At the close of the case for the prosecution the judge thought it right to amend the counts relating to false pretences so as to read “by falsely pretending that he was in a position to appoint.” etc. The jury convicted applt. on all counts:—Held: (1) the conviction for false pretences must be quashed, as the amendment of an indictment allowed by Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), is an amendment of a defect in form, & not the alteration & revision of the substance of a charge, such as had taken place in this case, which must necessarily prejudice accused; (2) the conviction for larceny must be quashed, because there was no evidence of larceny, as the persons seeking employment had in each case intended to part with their money; (3) Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 44 (3), could not apply where the indictment had charged false pretences & was up to the last moment wrong in substance.—R. v. HUGHES (1927), 136 L. T. 671; 91 J. P. 39; 43 T. L. R. 250; 28 Cox, C. C. 336, C. C. A.

The prisoner was convicted:—Held: as there was no true bill for rape, & as there was no indictment for indecent assault, the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. KITCHING (1929), 141 L. 4052 xiv. ———.]—A person accused of obtaining goods on false pretences from B. & S. was convicted on the two counts. The pretence consisted, in the B. case, of representations that accused was a bank officer, at a certain place, was low in clothes & was about to take a holiday, & giving an assumed name; in the S. case, accused wrote a letter with similar false statements of his name & employment & stating that he desired to obtain personal requirements, as he was about to be married. Subsequently accused called & obtained goods at S.'s warehouse. The statements as to the holiday & the marriage were not proved to be untrue. Accused wrote a similar letter to M., but it was not shown that he obtained goods there. Accused also obtained credit from F. The only false representation to F. was the giving of the false name.—Held: evidence of the representations to M. & F. was rightly admitted on the question of intent.—R. v. REYNOLDS, [1927] S. A. 4052 xv. ———.]—Similar crime abroad.—In an indictment the charges against accused were that, having conceived a fraudulent scheme for obtaining money from the public in Scotland & elsewhere by means of counterfeit drafts, he (a) on Sept. 21, 1927, uttered in a bank in Dundee a forged document which purported to be a draft of a finance co. in New York, & (b) on Sept. 23, in the same bank pretended, by telephone from London, that the draft was genuine. The indictment further charged accused with pretending, in pursuance of the scheme, in an hotel in Brussels, in Oct., that a forged document was a genuine draft of the same finance co.:—Held: while admittedly the incident in Belgium could not be made the subject of a substantive charge, that incident & the crime charged were sufficiently closely connected to admit of evidence relating to that incident being used by the prosecution for the purpose of supporting the other charges.—*H.M. 4129a i. Statement by wife—In absence of husband.—A statement made by the wife of accused was handed to him at his own request, & he admitted the signature was that of his wife, & made the remark, "I did not think she would let me down like this. Anyhow, it is not true I was sucked from. . . I got testimonials from both places when I left":—Held: an acknowledgment of the truth of the statement in whole or in part might be inferred, & the contents of the statement were properly submitted to the jury, the question of admission or not of the truth of the contents being left to them.—*R. v. At least a quarter of an hour after he was wounded he stated that it was applt. who had wounded him. The magistrate admitted evidence of this statement as part of the res gestæ & in consequence thereof, sentenced applt. to 18 months' imprisonment with hard labour, none of the other accused receiving more than 6 months:—Held: the statement was not part of the res gestæ & was wrongly admitted.—*KAWULA v. 4200 viii. ———.]—On a charge of incest there was evidence of prosecutrix having complained to her stepmother six days after the alleged crime was committed, & further evidence of prosecutrix & her sister was allowed in that two days later she had complained to her sister of the crime:—Held: evidence of the statements made by prosecutrix to her sister eight days after the occurrence when she had had ample opportunity to complain before, was inadmissible, & by its admission a substantial wrong was done to accused, & there should be a new trial.—R. v. PROTEAU (1923), 33 B. C. R. 39.—CAN.

q. i. ———.]—Upon appeal from a conviction for rape it was argued that evidence of a complaint, made by complainant to her husband many hours after the alleged offence, was improperly admitted, she having had earlier opportunities to complain to others, though not to her husband:—Held: it was for the trial judge to decide whether the complaint was made in circumstances which rendered it properly admissible—the material point was whether it was made on the first reasonable opportunity—& the judge found that it would not have been reasonable for the woman to have complained to other persons.—*R. v. f i. ————.]—Prisoner was indicted for an indecent assault on a girl under thirteen. At the trial there was admitted the unsworn testimony of the child alleged to have been assaulted & of two other children of tender years, & the evidence of the mother of the girl that she had asked the child what she was crying about, & that the child's reply was a complaint of prisoner's conduct to her:—Held: (1) the unsworn testimony of a child of tender years could not be corroborated by the unsworn testimony of any number of such children; (2) the answers of the girl to her mother's questions were not evidence of the facts complained of, & could not constitute corroboration of those facts.—R. v. COYLE, [1926] N. 208.—IR.

—.]—A panel was tried before a sheriff & jury upon an indictment which set forth certain lewd, indecent & libidinous practices towards a boy six years of age. The boy gave evidence in support of the charge, & his father & mother deposed to the condition of his person & clothing shortly after the offence, & also, to the statements which he had made to them de recenti. The sheriff charged the jury that the evidence was sufficient in law to entitle them to convict, & the panel was convicted. On appeal:—Held: the boy's evidence was sufficiently corroborated in law by the evidence of his parents, & evidence of statements made by a victim de recenti afforded corroboration of that victim's evidence.—*M'LENNAN v. e i. Person giving bribe.—A. & B. were charged with conspiring to obtain money from C. by unlawful means. The Crown case was that prisoners had conspired to obtain, & had obtained, a large sum of money from C. as a bribe to refrain from taking criminal proceedings against C. or his daughter, both of whom gave evidence for the Crown. Accused denied having asked for or received any money:—Held: C. was not an accomplice.—R. v. OLHOIM & McPHERSON, [1925] V. L. R. 377; 47 A. L. T. 10; 31 Argus L. R. 228.—AUS.

sp. Person cognisant of act of accused.—A witness, whose evidence had been admitted as corroborating a girl, was shown to have known of the act of accused & to have assisted him to procure certain drugs to be used to bring about a miscarriage, but there was no evidence to show he knew of the girl's age:—Held: there was no evidence to show that the witness was an accomplice & the judge was right in not directing the jury that his evidence was not corroborative.—R.

sq. Whether evidence corroborates—Functions of judge & jury.—It is a preliminary question of law for the judge to determine whether there is any evidence that does corroborate the story of the approver, so far as the complicity of the accused is concerned. The judge must not tell the jury that such or such witness does in fact corroborate the approver. That is the function of the jury & depends upon whether they believe the witness or not.—KERATI MOHAN CHAKAVARTY v. R. (1928), I. L. R. 56 Calc. 150.—IND.

h i. ————]—A woman was charged with the murder of the illegitimate child of her granddaughter. The case against her rested entirely on the evidence of her granddaughter, & this evidence, as regards the main facts, was practically wholly uncorroborated. This evidence went to show that the granddaughter was in the room at the time the woman was convicted & sentenced to death. Held: the rule requiring corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice applied to the facts of the case, & the jury should have been warned as to the danger of acting upon the granddaughter's evidence alone without corroboration. Accordingly the conviction was reversed, & a re-trial ordered under Courts of Justice Act, 1928, s. 5. —A.-G. v. LINEHAN, [1929] I. R. 19.—IR.

h ii. — Extent of corroboration necessary.—It is not sufficient for a trial judge to explain to a jury that, where witnesses are accomplices, they must be corroborated in some material particular before it is safe for a jury to convict. The magistrate having given deft. the benefit of the above Act:—Held: as there was nothing in the evidence as to character to bring the case within sect. 1, & the offence was not a trivial one, & there were no extenuating circumstances, the magistrate was not correct in law in giving deft. the benefit of the Act.

Before a magistrate deals with a case under the above Act, he should be satisfied that the case falls under one of the specific heads of sect. 1, & should state explicitly on which of the grounds he relies if he exercises the discretion conferred on him by the Act.—*GILROY v. - 5308a. —.]—When accused is charged with being a habitual criminal, the three convictions forming the basis of the charge under Prevention of Crime Act, 1908 (c. 59), s. 10 (2) (a), must be strictly proved; but evidence of other convictions may be given, without production of the record & evidence identifying accused with those convictions, as "evidence of character & repute" under sect. 10 (5), on the question whether accused is or is not leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life. Even apart from the statutory provision, such evidence can be given if there is any evidence that accused has admitted the convictions.—R. v. HAYWARD (1927), 137 L. T. 64; 28 Cox, C. He was also found to be a habitual criminal on the ground that he had been convicted on three previous occasions & that he was leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life, & he was sentenced to five years' preventive detention. In Sept. 1923 applt. was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment as a suspected person, & he was released on July 23, 1924. From Sept. to Dec. 1924 he was in honest employment. He committed the shopbreaking for which he had now been sentenced on Jan. 2, 1925:—Held: it was questionable whether, on these facts, the jury could properly have found applt. to be a habitual criminal, but if they had done so it must be on a direction to them that the burden of proof always rested on the prosecution to show that during the relevant period applt. had been leading, persistently, a dishonest or criminal life; as there were passages in the summing up which might have conveyed to the jury that, when the prosecution had gone a certain length, the burden rested on applt. to show that he had turned over a new leaf, the conviction must be quashed.—*R. v. (2) Nothing must be stated in the presence of jurors about the allegation of being a habitual criminal until the primary charge is disposed of.

(3) When a conviction as a habitual criminal has been remitted in view of the opinion of the Ct. of Criminal Appeal, it ought not to be alleged against prisoner on a subsequent trial.

(4) On the issue whether prisoner has been leading an honest life, no evidence is admissible of periods or of facts which has not been set out in the statutory notice.—R. v. TYREMAN (1925), 19 Cr. App. Rep. 4, C. C. A.

5361a. ———— Before a sentence of preventive detention can be passed three things are requisite: first, that prisoner shall have been convicted of being a habitual criminal; secondly, that the ct. shall have taken such a view of the substantive crime of which prisoner has then been convicted as to think it right, by reason of that crime & not for any other reason, to pass a sentence of penal servitude; & thirdly, that the ct., in the exercise of its independent discretion, shall be of opinion that by reason of the criminal habits & mode of life of prisoner it is expedient for the protection of the public that he should be kept in detention for a lengthened period of years. Sentence of preventive detention quashed where the judge at the trial had not exercised such independent discretion, but had treated the sentence as necessarily following the conviction as a habitual criminal.—*R. v. st. Objection to transcript of evidence—Translation.—Part of the evidence on a charge of murder was given in Irish, which was translated into English, so that it might be understood by the judge, the jury, & others concerned in the case. This evidence was not officially recorded in Irish as given, but only as it was translated into English, & objection to the transcript was taken on behalf of the accused, who sought leave to amend their notices of application for leave to appeal (which had already been served) by including this objection.—Held: as it is not an essential requisite for the purpose of an application for leave to appeal to have a complete transcript or any transcript of the evidence before the ct., the ct., being satisfied that the transcript of the note of the interpreter's rendering of the evidence was a completely accurate record & fully adequate for the purpose of disposing of the applications for leave to appeal, & having regard to all the facts, refused to allow the notices of application for leave to appeal to be amended.—A-G. v. JOYCE, A-G. v. WALSH, [1929] 1 R. 526.—IR.

On reaching the rotunda of the hotel M. said to the night clerk "I got hit in the eye, but the other fellow got worse than I did," & the clerk saw that there was blood on both of M.'s hands. Immediately after they had left the hotel, a third man, who came to the hotel with them, was found dead & in a battered condition in the room they had left. On appeal from the conviction of accused for manslaughter:—Held: there was non-direction amounting to misdirection in the charge of the judge, to the jury, the result of which was that the strongest evidence in favour of accused, viz., M.'s appearance after coming out of the room & his statement of his actions, was not submitted to the jury's consideration as it ought, & there should be a new trial. 6066a. ———— Direction that corroboration exists not warranted on facts.—(1) It is a ground for quashing a conviction, if the jury is directed that there is corroboration of an accomplice's evidence, when the ct. thinks there is none.

(2) In dealing with the defence of an alibi, the ct. of trial ought to direct the jury on any part of the period of time which is relevant.

(3) Without saying that in every case it is proper to sentence an accomplice pleading guilty before he gives evidence for the Crown, it is obvious that where he is not sentenced it is more than ever necessary to warn the jury about accepting his testimony, because his object is to mitigate his own punishment (AVORY, J.).—R. v. SMITH (1924), 18 Cr. App. Rep. 19, C. C. A.

sd. Direction that evidence as to accused's immoral character relevant—Presumption of innocence.—The judge directed the jury that the facts proved with reference to prisoner's character were relevant for their consideration,

& that the presumption of innocence applied with less effect to prisoner than to a man of proved good character. The jury found the prisoner guilty by a narrow majority:—Held: the judge had misdirected the jury in law, in respect that the immoral character of the panel was irrelevant, & the presumption of innocence applied equally in all cases, & could only be displaced by evidence relevant to prove the crime charged.—SLATER v. H.M. ADVOCATE, [1928] S. C. (J.) 94.—SCOT.

6064 vii. ———— The rule as to the danger of convicting upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not a strict rule of law, but merely one of practical wisdom & carefulness, & the omission of the trial judge to give the customary warning, even if technically an error, does not constitute such a miscarriage of justice or substantial wrong as to vitiate the conviction.—R. v. GALLAGHER, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 1059; 3 W. W. R. 357.—CAN.

6064 viii. ———— A charge to the jury, that, while it was dangerous to convict on the evidence of an accomplice without corroboration, yet in this case it was the right & duty of the jury, if on the accomplice's evidence they felt no reasonable doubt of the guilt of accused, to convict him:—Held: a misdirection.

If a judge discusses the evidence of an accomplice & points out its consistency, he should explain to the jury the considerations which prompt an accomplice to testify against accused.—R. v. SLEE, [1926] 1 D. L. R. 729; 45 Can. Crim. Cas. 190; 58 O. L. R. 313.—CAN.

6064 ix. ———— When the evidence against a prisoner is the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, it is wrong for the judge to tell the jury that, if they are quite certain that the accomplice is telling the truth, they have not only the right to convict prisoner but that it is their duty to do so. In such a case, the judge should follow the rule laid down in R. v. Baskerville, No. 6056; the judge should warn the jury of the danger of convicting prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice & in his discretion, may advise them not to convict upon such evidence, but he should point out to the jury that it is within their legal province to convict upon such unconfirmed evidence.—GOUIN v. R., [1926] S. C. R. 539.—CAN.

A charge which in effect puts the evidence of an accomplice on the same footing as that of an ordinary witness amounts to a miscarriage of justice.—R. v. BACHRU (Sask.), [1927] 3 D. L. R. 1179; [1927] 2 W. W. R. 171; 48 Can. Crim. Cas. 53.—CAN.

6067 iv. ———— On the trial of a charge for indecent assault on a girl of under sixteen years the trial judge, in the course of warning the jury of the danger of convicting on the uncorroborated testimony of the girl, said: "In such a case, it is usual, in fact, necessary, to caution the jury against the danger of acting upon the uncorroborated testimony of the girl," & also, "unless she is supported by independent testimony which implicates the accused, her evidence is not an entirely safe or satisfactory foundation for a verdict against him".—Held: this direction was sufficient.—*R. v. 9042a. ———.] At a school for boys there was a rule prohibiting smoking by pupils during the school term whether on the school precincts or in public. During the term a pupil rather less than sixteen years old, after having left the school for the day & returned home, smoked a cigarette in the public street, & next day the schoolmaster administered to him five strokes of the cane as a punishment for breach of the rule. On the hearing of an information against the schoolmaster for an alleged assault on the boy the justices found that the rule in question was reasonable, that the father of the boy by sending him to the school authorised the schoolmaster to administer reasonable punishment to the boy for breach of a school rule, & that the punishment administered was reasonable; & they dismissed the information. An order nisi having been obtained calling upon the justices to show cause why they should not state a case on a question of law :—Held : the decision of the justices was right, no question of law arose on which they could state a case, & that the order nisi should be discharged.—*R. v. 9307a. —. —.]—On the trial of a prisoner for having had unlawful carnal knowledge of a girl under sixteen years of age, the judge directed the jury that although what the girl said to her mother several months after the offence was committed was not evidence, yet the jury could infer what the girl said, namely, that the prisoner was responsible for her condition, from what the mother did, because the prisoner was at once accused, & that that amounted to corroboration of the girl's story. Further, that the fact that the prisoner when he was charged by a police officer & cautioned made no denial of the charge was also corroboration of her story:—Held: both directions were wrong. Any inference as to what the girl told her mother could not amount to corroboration of the girl's story, as it proceeded from the girl herself, & the girl could not corroborate herself. When H. presented the draft at L. Bank, Ltd., Liverpool, payment was refused. On a charge against F. under Criminal Code, s. 355, for converting the money to his own use & for failing to account for it, it was found by the trial judge that F., Ltd., was an alias for F. himself; that F. knew of the transaction carried out by his clerk; that F., Ltd., had no credit either at L. Bank, Liverpool, or at P. Bank, London, & they did not remit H.'s money to London as undertaken:—Held: on the facts stated the case did not come within sect. 355, & the conviction was set aside.—R. v. Imprisonment for breach of interdiction being in vindication of public law, it must not be assumed that an order for release will follow upon an apology & promise of obedience to the orders of the ct., even though such apology is accompanied by a statement on behalf of complainant that he no longer requires the protection which the original interdiction gave him.—JOHNSON v. Libel Act, 1845 (c. 75), s. 2, amending Libel Act, 1843 (c. 96), s. 2, is not to be communicated to the jury, &, where money has been so paid in, it is contempt of ct. to publish before the trial a statement that a particular sum has been paid by deft. to pltf.'s solr., inasmuch as the publication of such a statement is calculated to prejudice the fair trial of the action.

(2) In such a case the proper procedure to be adopted by deft., who alleges that pending the trial of the action pltf. has been guilty of contempt of court, is not to apply for a rule nisi for attachment, but to proceed by notice of motion in the action.—*R. v. 192a. — [—]—A publication made with the clear intention of prejudicing the fair trial of an issue pending before a ct. is obviously a contempt of ct., & will be punished as such. But where the ct. is satisfied that there was no such intention & yet the publication might prejudice a pending trial, the ct. will, in considering whether a writ of attachment should issue, take into account the circumstances of the case, & no attachment will be granted unless (inter alia) the ct. is satisfied that the pending proceeding is a genuine proceeding, brought & intended to be prosecuted to effect its avowed purpose.—R. v. DAILY MAIL (EDITOR), Ex p. FACTOR (1928), 44 T. L. R. 303, D. C.

enforcing those terms. In the latter case the terms are not an order of the ct. capable of being enforced by proceedings for contempt, but must be enforced by an action for specific performance of the terms or for an injunction to restrain breach of the terms, followed by proceedings for contempt in the event of further breach, while in the former case contempt proceedings can be launched forthwith on breach. —DASHWOOD v. 37a. — Waters within fauces terrae.—Defts., an Italian co., moved to set aside an order for service of notice of a writ in personam upon them in Italy, in respect of a collision between their vessel, which sank, & plffs.' vessel in the Bristol Channel some 10½ or 12½ miles from the English coast & 9½ or 7½ miles from the Welsh coast according to the respective cases. The ct. was informed by the A.-G. that he was instructed by the Secretary of State for Home Affairs that the spot where the collision was alleged to have occurred was not within the limits to which the territorial sovereignty of His Majesty extended:—Held: having regard to the statement of the A.-G. (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, No. 136a, ante), the place where the collision took place was not within the jurisdiction of the High Ct., & the order for service of notice of the writ on defts. in Italy must be set aside.—THE FAGERNES, [1927] P. 311; 96 L. PART I. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 4.—C. (c).

sb. General issue pleaded—Subsequent proof of Crown's title to reversion—Withdrawal of plea—Costs.—In an information of intrusion, the rule to plead was served on Nov. 21, 1832. Deft. from time to time obtained further time to plead, & on Apr. 15, 1833, pleaded the general issue. Notice of trial was served for the sittings after Michaelmas term, 1837; & the trial was postponed at the instance of deft. On Jan. 23, 1838, deft. discovered certain documents, showing, as he alleged, that the reversion was vested in the Crown. The ct. allowed him to withdraw the plea of the general issue, & plead his title specially, upon payment of all costs incurred by the Crown, consequent on the plea of the general issue.—*A.-G. v. - 374a. — — — — — When allowed.—Under Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 7, the ct. has jurisdiction to allow a petition of right to be amended, provided the amendment does not involve a substantial alteration in the cause of action, so that the allowance of it without a fresh fiat would operate in derogation of the prerogative of the Crown. The test whether a particular amendment ought to be allowed is this: if the petition had originally been presented in the form in which it stands after amendment, is there a reasonable probability that the fiat would not have been refused?—*BADMAN BROTHERS v. - 374b. — Service of copy on person in possession of property claimed.—Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5.—A lunatic, at the date of her death in 1798, was entitled to certain funds in Court representing the residuary estate of her father. In 1791 the master had reported that the lunatic had no heir-at-law or next of kin. In 1798 & 1801 the Crown made ex gratia grants of these funds to certain persons & obtained an indemnity in respect of these grants. In 1926 a petition was presented by persons claiming to be the next of kin of the lunatic for the payment to them of the whole of her personal estate. The parties agreed to confine themselves, for the present, to seeking a determination of the following questions: (a) whether the petition was maintainable on the assumption that no part of the funds in question ever came into the hands of or was dealt with by his present Majesty or his nominees or grantees or was carried to the Consolidated Fund; (b) whether the petition was barred by any Statute of Limitations; (c) whether in view of Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5, the suppliants could proceed without serving the petition upon the successors in title of the persons to whom the ex gratia grants had been made:—Held: Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5, did not apply to the case.—Re MASON, [1928] 1 Ch. 385; 97 L. 374a i.— May be amended by court—When allowed.—Where a suppliant seeks to substitute or add a substantially new cause of action, the amendment should not be allowed in the absence of the Lieutenant-Governor's fiat or the consent of the A.-G.; but if the substance of the case is not changed, the ct. can help the suppliant by amendment.—NORTHERN CONSTRUCTION Co. v. PART V. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

c i. — Commitment not in any criminal case under any Act of Parliament of Canada.—Petitioner was convicted, in July & October, 1928, on charges under Intoxicating Liquor Act of New Brunswick, & was committed to gaol in York County, N.B. He applied to a judge of this ct. for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that, on & prior to Dec. 10, 1917, Canada Temperance Act was in force in said county, that, on that date, an Order in Council, passed pursuant to Statutes of Canada, 1917, c. 30, became effective, suspending the operation of the Canada Temperance Act in said county: that, at the time of the passing of said Order in Council, there was in force the New Brunswick Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1916, referred to in said Order in Council as being as restrictive as the Canada Temperance Act; that, in 1927, New Brunswick Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1927, c. 3, came into force, which repealed the 1916 Act, & was less restrictive than Canada Temperance Act; & he contended that, as a result, the said suspension of the operation of Canada Temperance Act automatically ceased, & that Act came into force in said county, & that the offences for which he was convicted & committed to gaol were offences against that Act & not against the Provincial Act:—Held: a judge of this ct. had no jurisdiction to issue the writ applied for, as the commitment was not "in any criminal case under any Act of Parliament of Canada" within Supreme Court Act, s. 57.—DOHERTY v. 2736a. — Certificate of Post Office medical officer—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84).—Appet., a telegraphist in the employment of the Postmaster-General, complained to the Post Office medical officer at G. that she was suffering from telegraphist's cramp. In accordance with the regulations of the Post Office medical service, the case was referred to the chief medical officer, who had special knowledge of telegraphist's cramp, & he certified that appet. was not suffering from it:—Held: (1) the giving of a certificate was a judicial act, in respect of which certiorari would lie; (2) it issued ex debito justitiæ at the instance of an aggrieved person; (3) an appeal to a medical referee under sect. 43 (1) (f) of the above Act was not equally beneficial, since he could only deal with the medical correctness of the certificate & could not inquire into its validity.—R. v. sm. Plea of "guilty" disputed.—Deft. having pleaded guilty & being summarily convicted by a police magistrate, moved for a certiorari, denying that he had so pleaded:—Held: deft. had pleaded guilty, & the motion was dismissed.—R. v. ARMSTRONG (1922), 38 Can. Crim. Cas. 98.—CAN.

sn. — ——Where deft. had been summarily convicted by a magistrate, who had been informed by a sworn interpreter that deft. pleaded guilty:—Held: certiorari was not available, unless the presumption that the proceedings were regular was rebutted.—R. v. LEE WAH DAI (1923), 41 Can. Crim. Cas. 152.—CAN.

sp. — ——The ct. on certiorari will quash a conviction by a magistrate, made without evidence being taken but on the statement of the sworn interpreter that accused pleaded guilty, where it appears to the ct. that accused did not really understand what offence he was charged with. In such a case, accused cannot be taken to have pleaded guilty & the magistrate had no jurisdiction to convict.—R. v. MLAKER, [1923] 3 W. W. R. 988; 40 Can. Crim. Cas. 287.—CAN.

PART I. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

57 i. Time of legal memory :—The legal recognition of a custom in British India depends upon its antiquity, certainty & uniformity. As to antiquity or the period of "legal memory," a British ct. need not extend its inquiries beyond its own establishment. Moreover a series of legal decisions confirming a custom is cogent evidence that such custom has the force of law. —CHAN PYU v. SAW SIN (1928), 1 L. L. 11. 6 Ran. 623.—IND.

PART I. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 1.

p. 1. — Rwaj-i-am :—Unsupported by instances.—A rway-i-am is admissible in evidence to prove the facts entered thereon, subject to rebuttal,

& that the statements therein may be accepted, even if unsupported by instances. Manuals of customary law, in accordance with rway-i-am, issued by authority for each district, stand on much the same footing as the rway-i-am itself as evidence of custom. —VARSHNO DITTI v. RAMESHRI (1928), L. R. 55 Ind. App. 407.—IND.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

303 vii. —. —.]—The question whether a trade custom or usage exists is one of fact, & clear & convincing testimony is required to prove its existence; it must be shown that the custom or usage relied on is certain & reasonable, & so universally recognised that everyone engaged in the trade knows, or should know, of it. —YEATES v. BARRETT (Sask.), [1927] 3 D. L. R. 812; [1927] 3 W. W. R. 286.—CAN.

- 544a. ———.]—Pltfs., shipowners, chartered a steamer to defts. to carry a cargo of timber from the Baltic to Hull. The charterparty contained a clause as follows: "Cargo to be loaded & discharged with customary steamship dispatch according to the custom of the respective ports. The cargo to be brought to & taken from alongside the steamer at charterer's risk & expense as customary." The steamer discharged the cargo at Hull in due course, but disputes arose between pltfs. & defts. as to the division of the cost of discharging the cargo. Pltfs. brought an action to recover a sum which they had paid in effecting the discharge which they said should have been paid by defts. Defts. refused to pay on the ground that by the custom of the port of Hull the expense in question should be borne by the shipowners:—Held: the custom relied on by defts. was inconsistent with the language of the charterparty & was not admissible in order to decide upon whom the expense in question should rest.—REDERI AKT. - 703a. Usage as to arbitration.—Pltfs. sold to defts. a quantity of paraffin wax under a contract providing, "any dispute arising under this contract to be settled by arbitrators in London in the usual way." A claim was made by defts. against pltfs., & the arbitrators, being unable to agree, appointed an umpire by a document headed, "the use of this form constitutes a submission to the rules of the assocn." i.e. the London Oil & Tallow Trades Assocn. The umpire awarded that defts.' claim failed & that they were to pay the costs of the arbitration. The rules of the assocn. provided for an appeal to an appeal committee, & defts. claimed a right of appeal. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover the costs of the arbn., & the evidence was that in the trade in paraffin wax the usual way of settling a dispute by arbn. was to appoint arbitrators who could appoint an umpire whose decision would be final:—Held: the heading did not apply & the umpire was really appointed in pursuance of the original agreement as to arbn. & not under the rules of the assocn., & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—PALMER & Co., LTD. v. PART II. SECT. 3.

27 i. Application of rule—In tort—Property destroyed by fire.—Where damages were recovered for loss through destruction of property by fire caused by deft.'s negligence:—Held: the measure of damages was not the cost of replacing the property destroyed, but the value of the property as it stood at the time of the destruction. The cost of replacing may be taken into account in arriving at such value.—STEVENS v. ABBOTSFORD LUMBER CO., [1924] 1 D. L. R. 1163; 1 W. W. R. 660; 33 B. C. R. 299.—CAN.

27 iii. ———.—Depreciation in selling value.—In an action for damages in respect of injury done to the land, the trial judge assessed pltf.'s damages at $4,500, estimating the actual damage which flowed from deft.'s wrong-doing at $3,500; but, taking into account deft.'s whole course of conduct & persistence in the wrong which he was doing, fixed the total damages at $4,500:—Held: having regard to the evidence & to the fact that the measure of damages is not the sum necessary to restore the property, but the depreciation in its selling value, the finding of $3,500, for the actual damage done, could not be said to be clearly wrong.—PARFARD v. CAVOTTI, [1929] 1 D. L. R. 111; 63 O. L. R. 171.—CAN.

30 v. ———.—Where plaintiff has alternative claim—Duty to elect.—Damages cannot be recovered both in tort & for breach of contract, when the tort & the breach of contract result from the same act; in such a case pltf. must elect or be deemed to have elected; & if he seeks to recover damages for breach of contract, they must be measured upon that basis, & not upon the basis of any coincident or concomitant act of tort.—*TORONTO HOCKEY CLUB v. 42 iv. ———.—In an action for wrongfully obstructing the flow of a river by increasing the height of a weir, whereby pltf.'s lands, abutting on the river, were flooded, the judge declined to direct the jury that actual damage was essential to maintain the action:—Held: the direction was right.—McGLONE v. SMITH (1888), 22 L. R. Ir. 559.—IR.

51 iv. ———.—No reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit—Death of young child in accident.—Held: a verdict of damages awarded to parents of young children killed in an accident arising from negligence could not stand, where there was no reasonable expectation of future pecuniary benefit. In a case of this kind damages are not awarded as a solatium nor from sentimental

59 vii. — *Pltf. cannot recover damages on the ground of the permanence of existing personal injuries unless the evidence goes the length of showing that there is no reasonable prospect of permanent recovery. 74 i. Cause of action independent of damage—Whether prospective damage recoverable—Remediation of contract.—Defcs., the owners of a cotton ginning mill, contracted in Oct. 1919, that, for a period of six months, they would put their mill at the disposal of pltf., a cotton merchant, for half its working time, at fixed rates in order to gin raw cotton which pltf. contemplated buying & which he agreed to supply to them for the purpose. In Nov. before any of pltf.'s cotton had been taken by the mill, defcs. repudiated the contract. Pltf. sued defcs. for damages:—Held: the breach being anticipatory the damages recoverable were not confined to the extra cost which pltf. had paid to the other millers for ginning such cotton as he had tendered to defcs., but were the estimated loss of profit to pltf. by reason of the contract not being carried out; pltf. was not bound to buy cotton & have it ginned at other mills under his obligation to mitigate the damages.—RANGOPAL v. DHANJJI JADHAVJI BHUTIA (1928), 1 L. R. 35 Ind. App. 299.—IND.

83 i. Damages caused the gist of the action—Prospective damage—Whether recoverable.—A married woman having suffered from nervous shock as the result of an accident, but not so as to deprive her husband of her services or society:—Held: that he might be put to expense in the future was a consideration too remote to entitle him to damages.—HOGAN v. 97 i. Ascertainment difficult—No ground for refusal to award.—H. passed a mtgce. bond over his farm, a condition being that H. would, on demand by the mtgce., pass a collateral bond over his movable property on the farm. In breach of this condition, H. sold & delivered such movables to a third party:—Held: although the damages, if any, were difficult to assess, the mtgce. was entitled to some damages for a wilful invasion of his rights.—CATO v. AJON (1923), 44 N. L. R. 113.—S. AF.

147 i. Pain & suffering.—In an action for damages for personal injuries arising from negligence: Held: items which should go to make up pltf.'s damages were (inter alia) a sum, not to compensate for, but to represent the inconvenience of his condition, & his pain & suffering, past & future. —*COSGROVE v. 149 i. — Nervous shock—Actual impact.—Damages claimed for nervous shock, as a result of an accident arising from negligence, cannot be recovered where the nervous shock produces only a mental disturbance unaccompanied by any actual physical injury. If impact is not necessary, it is a question of fact in each case whether or not pltf. sustained physical injury & whether such injury was the natural & reasonable result of def.'s negligence. —*HOGAN v. 149 iv. — — — — — J—A man & a woman to whom he was engaged were knocked down by a motor omnibus. The man was struck by the omnibus & received considerable physical injury. The woman did not appear to have been actually struck, & she received no direct physical injury, but she suffered severely from shock. In an action of damages at her instance the judge directed the jury that, if by the fault of defts. pursuer had suffered nervous shock through apprehension for her own safety, they were entitled, in assessing damages, to include any aggravation of that shock occasioned by the fact that her companion was involved in the catastrophe. The jury found that pursuer had suffered personal injury resulting in nervous shock involving apprehension for her own safety, aggravated by anxiety for the safety of her companion, & awarded damages —Held, in the circumstances the jury could not be asked to discriminate between the amount of shock suffered by pursuer due to apprehension for her own safety & the amount due to anxiety for her companion —CUMMIE v. WAINWRIGHT, [1927] S. C. 538 —SCOT.

162 i. Loss of or injury to property—Collision at sea—Loss of musical manuscripts.—In an action of damages against steamship owners, arising out of the sinking of one of their ships, pursuer claimed £15,000 in respect of the loss of certain music & orchestral settings in manuscript used by a concert party of which she was manager. She averred that the lost manuscripts were the sole copies of the compositions in question, & that she had the sole right to publish, perform, or issue mechanical reproductions, & to obtain copyright thereof. The compositions had cost pursuer about £2,000, but she averred that, through her concert party, they had acquired a reputation among the public which had greatly enhanced their value, & she further averred that she would have made substantial profits from the lost music in respect of copyright royalties, publication & sale, & disposal of performing & mechanical rights, apart from the use of it by her concert party :—Held: (1) pursuer's averments as to loss of contingent profits from copyright royalties, publication & sale, & disposal of performing & mechanical rights, were irrelevant; (2) the measure of her damages in respect of the lost music was the cost of its replacement as newly as might be, ascertained either by the market price of a actual replacement, or by consideration of the commission which would have to be paid to composers of music of the class to which the lost compositions belonged. --REAVIS v. CLAN LINE STREAMERS, LTD., [1926] S. C. 215.—SCOT.

sd. CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS, [1923] 4 D. L. R. 818; 3 W. W. R. 1152.—CAN.

sf. Loss of time -Injury in motor-car collision.—In an action for damages for injuries arising out of a motor collision, where it was found that the accident was caused by pltf.'s negligence:—Held: damages should be given defr. for loss of time, repairs to the car & costs. —TIEMAN v. McKENZIE, [1923] 1 D. L. R. 1189.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.

sk. Depreciation in price—Machinery components purchased by vendor to perform contract—Held: the vendor was not entitled, as damages for breach of contract to purchase an ammonia gas compressing outfit, to a sum for loss through decrease in price of the parts purchased for the purpose of the contract, this not being a loss "directly & naturally resulting in the ordinary course of events from the buyer's breach of contract," as there was nothing in the negotiations for the contract to give the purchaser to understand that the vendor would have to go into the market & buy the various parts to make up the plant.—GENERAL SUPPLY CO. sl. Loss of custom—Defective goods sold but replaced.—Certain goods supplied under contract not complying with the warranted description:—Held: it could not reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, at the time they made the contract, that plffs. were to compensate defts. for such loss of business as defts. might incur by

In an action for breach of contract the jury awarded to pltf., over & above her salary already paid, damages for loss of reputation through her not being employed to play the part:—Held: as there was an express agreement to advertise pltf. this necessarily implied an obligation to give pltf. an opportunity of acting, & pltf. was entitled, in addition to her salary already paid, to the damages awarded by the jury for loss of reputation.—MARB  v. That sub-vendee sold to a second sub-vendee, who sold one of the skins, which had been made into the collar of a fur coat, to a third sub-vendee. The third sub-vendee sold to a woman who wore the coat & developed dermatitis on the face in consequence of antimony contained in the skin. In each sale the vendor knew the particular purpose for which the goods were required by the purchaser, & there was an implied warranty that the goods were reasonably fit for such purpose. The ultimate purchaser brought an action for breach of contract against her supplier, the third sub-vendee. The third sub-vendee defended the action, & in so doing acted reasonably; but in the result the ultimate purchaser recovered damages & to the wife against deft. It was sought to give in evidence the wife's medical & hospital bills:—Held: the bills had been contracted by the wife as her husband's agent & were his liability alone.—SCOBLE v. WOODWARD, [1924] 1 W. W. R. 1040.—CAN.

costs against him. The third sub-vendee, who had incurred certain additional costs in connection with the action, claimed to be reimbursed by the second sub-vendee, & after some resistance, incurring further costs, the second sub-vendee paid. The second sub-vendee then claimed against the first sub-vendee, who after some dispute incurring further costs, also paid. The first sub-vendee claimed against pltf.s., who, after taking advice, occasioning further costs, paid. Pltf.s. sued defts. for breach of contract, claiming as damages the damages recovered by the ultimate purchaser, the costs on both sides in that action, & the costs of the intermediate actions:—Held: pltf.s. were entitled to recover the damages which might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract; the parties must have contemplated that damages would be claimed, if there were a breach of contract of the kind that had occurred, by parties separated by several contractual steps from each of the immediate parties to each of the contracts along the line; pltf.s.' damages should include (1) the damages recovered by the ultimate purchaser, (2) the costs on both sides in that action, inasmuch as it was reasonably defended, & (3) the costs of the intermediate actions, in so far as they were reasonably incurred.—*KASLER & COHEN v. - 235a. — Costs awarded in previous proceedings, but not recovered.]—Pltf.s. sought to recover from defts., as special damage, the costs which they themselves had incurred in previous litigation in which they were defts. Pltf.s. in the present action sent a motor lorry to be overhauled by defts. The repairs were carried out & the lorry was returned. Very shortly afterwards, while the lorry was in use on the highway, one of the wheels came off & damaged the van of pltf. in the previous litigation, who brought an action in the county ct. to recover damages against present pltf.s. He won the action at the hearing, but the decision was reversed on appeal. He was a man of straw & unable to pay the costs incurred. Present pltf.s. sued present defts. for damages for alleged breach of contract & negligence, & a common jury found in pltf.s.' favour. After argument as to the right of pltf.s. to recover as special damage against defts., on account of their breach of contract 1735a. Incorporation of guarantee clause—Identity of clause uncertain—Clause not available.—Pltfs., a ship-repairing co., requiring a new intermediate pressure cylinder for the engines of a steamer which they had contracted to repair, obtained a quotation from defts., marine engineers. At the head of defts.' letter was a printed notice, "All offers are subject to our usual strike & guarantee clauses, accidents, etc." Pltfs. ordered the cylinder, but after it had been delivered & fitted it was found to be defective. A new cylinder was subsequently supplied by defts., but owing to the delay pltfs. were not able to complete the repairs in accordance with their contract with the shipowners & had to pay them damages. In an action to recover the amount of the damages defts. alleged that the contract for the supply of the cylinder was made subject to "our usual" guarantee clause & that their guarantee clause provided (inter alia) that "the contractors shall not in any case be liable for any detention of the vessel or other consequential damages howsoever arising":—Held: as it was not clear what guarantee clause was incorporated, since the clause suggested by defts. was the clause in their usual engine agreement which was drawn to meet the case of engines being supplied to a shipowner & not to meet such a case as the present, & as it was not proved that defts. had made it clear that they intended to limit their liability, pltfs. were entitled to recover.—ALISON (J. 10a. ———.—[An extension of British jurisdiction in a British protectorate by Orders in Council may be referred to an exercise of power by an act of State, unchallengeable in any British ct., or to statutory powers given by Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37), under which the jurisdiction acquired by the Crown in a protected country is indistinguishable in legal effect from that acquired by conquest. The Crown cannot, except by statute, deprive itself of freedom to make Orders in Council, even such as are inconsistent with previous Orders.

Before the conquest & annexation of the South African Republic Swaziland was an independent native State, treated as a protected dependency of that Republic, by which it was administered under a Convention made in 1894 between Great Britain & the Republic. The Convention provided for the preservation of native law, & the agricultural & grazing rights of the natives. The annexation did not extend to Swaziland. Subsequently under Orders in Council certain lands in Swaziland were expropriated to the Crown, to the extinguishment of the use & occupation of them by natives under native law, certain lands being allotted exclusively to the natives :—Held : the Orders in Council were effective, even if they were not within the powers recognised by the Convention.—SOBHUZA II. v. 20a. Power of expropriation in mandated territory.—By the Mandate for Palestine, dated July 24, 1922, the Council of the League of Nations, acting under art. 22 of the Covenant of the League, entrusted to Great Britain the administration of Palestine. Art. 2 of the Mandate provided that Great Britain should be responsible for "safeguarding the civil & religious rights of the inhabitants of Palestine irrespective of race & religion." In 1923 an Order in Council authorised the High Comr. for Palestine to promulgate such ordinances as might be necessary for the peace, good order, & government of the country, & were not inconsistent with the Mandate. The High Comr. promulgated an ordinance expropriating certain springs for the purpose of supplying water to Jerusalem, with certain provisions for compensation. In an action by the owners of the springs the Supreme Ct., sitting as a ct. of first instance, held that the ordinance was ultra vires, on the ground that it was inconsistent with the Mandate in that the provisions for compensation were inadequate. Special leave to appeal was granted, all questions of jurisdiction being left open. An Order in Council had made provision for appeals to the Privy Council, but only from orders of the Supreme Ct. sitting as a Ct. of Appeal :—Held : (1) the appeal was competent, since the jurisdiction under the Mandate was jurisdiction in a foreign country within the description in the preamble to Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37) ; (2) it was the right & duty of the ct. to consider whether the ordinance was consistent with the Mandate, but art. 2 had been misconstrued, & the ordinance was valid ; (3) art. 2 did not mean that in every case of expropriation for a public purpose full compensation must be given. Natural justice required that in the absence of exceptional circumstances, fair provision should be made for compensation, but that depended not upon civil right, but upon the principles of sound administration, & it was not within the province of the ct. to consider whether

In 1923 applts. not having then constructed any works, the provincial Govt. granted to resps. a lease of the water power & bed of the river within limits which overlapped those referred to in applts.' letters patent. Applts. brought an action against resps., claiming a declaration that applts. had a vested right in the river to construct dams, & an injunction:—Held: the action failed, since the letters patent contained no grant of a proprietary right in, or power to take possession of, any part of the river or its bed.—UNITED MANUFACTURING CO. v. 56a. — Future exercise—Cannot be fettered.—Acting within the constitution, the legislature of a self-governing Colony or State is supreme, & no act of the executive Govt. can fetter in any legal sense the future exercise of its powers, or give to any person a title other than such as could be conferred under existing legislation.

When New South Wales Consitution Act, 1855, was enacted, Garden Island, in Port Jackson, was part of the waste lands of the Crown, the entire management & control of which were vested by sect. 2 of that Act in the legislature of the Colony. By notices published in 1865 & 1866, pursuant to Crown Lands Alienation Act, 1861 (N.S.W.), the island was dedicated as a naval depot. It continued to be so used by the Imperial naval authorities until 1913, but since that date it had been occupied by the Commonwealth naval authorities for the use of the naval forces which it provided & maintained. An Imperial Order in Council made in 1899 under Colonial Fortifications Act, 1877, recited an agreement by which the Government of New South Wales were to erect buildings & carry out works, partly on Garden Island, & the Imperial Government agreed that when the buildings & works were completed & the sites "conveyed, granted, or dedicated in perpetuity for the use of Her Majesty's navy in the same way as Garden Island had been," the Imperial Government would surrender certain lands which were not within 1855 Act, s. 2; the Order then, in consideration of the agreement, vested the lands in the Government of New South Wales. In 1923 the Minister administering the Crown Lands Consolidation Act, 1913 (N.S.W.), acting under sect. 25 of that Act, revoked the dedication of Garden Island:—Held: the recital in the Order in Council of 1899 did not preclude the Minister from revoking the dedication in the manner provided by the Act of 1913, & the revocation was effectual under sect. 25 of that Act, although the notice did not state the manner in which it was proposed to deal with the island. Judgment of the High Ct. affirmed, subject to the declaration made, that resp. State was entitled to possession of Garden Island, being varied to a declaration, in the words of Crown Lands Consolidation Act, 1913, s. 25, that by virtue of the revocation the island had become Crown lands within that Act, & liable to be dealt with in accordance therewith.—AUSTRALIA COMMONWEALTH v. 91a. Enactment preventing King in Council from granting leave to appeal—Criminal case.]—

Sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code of Canada, if & so far as it is intended to prevent the King in Council from giving effective leave to appeal against an order of a Canadian Ct. in a criminal case, is invalid. The legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada as to criminal law & procedure, under British North America Act, 1867 (c. 3), s. 91, is confined to action to be taken in Canada. Further, an enactment annulling the royal prerogative to grant special leave to appeal would be inconsistent with Judicial Committee Acts, 1833 (c. 41) & 1844 (c. 69), & would be invalid under Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865 (c. 63), s. 2. The royal assent to the Criminal Code could not give validity to an enactment which was void by Imperial statute; exclusion of the prerogative could be accomplished only by an Imperial statute.

According to the well-settled practice of the Judicial Committee His Majesty is advised to intervene in a criminal case only if it is shown that, by a disregard of the power of legal process, or by some violation of natural justice, or otherwise, substantial & grave injustice has been done.

Applt. was convicted in Alberta of an offence under Govt. Liquor Control Act of Alberta, which did not incorporate sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code of Canada, & of an offence under Canada Temperance Act, R. S. Can., 1906 (c. 152). For each offence he was sentenced to a fine, & in default imprisonment. The Supreme Ct. of Alberta, rejecting contentions as to the construction & invalidity of the material sects., affirmed the convictions, but gave leave to appeal to the Privy Council. The Crown petitioned the Judicial Committee to quash the appeals as incompetent, having regard to sect. 1025. Applt. petitioned for special leave to appeal. The petitions were heard with the appeals:—Held: (1) each appeal was in a "criminal case" to which sect. 1025 applied, so far as it was valid; (2) in the absence of argument to the contrary, sect. 1025 prevented the Appellate Div. from giving effective leave to appeal; (3) sect. 1025 did not exclude the prerogative right to give leave to appeal; (4) the cases were clearly not within the category of the exceptional cases in which special leave to appeal was advised in a criminal matter.—*NADAN v. 108a. ——— Question of substance, not of form.—(1) The Parliament of Canada cannot, by purporting to create penal sections under head 27 of the above sect., appropriate to itself exclusively a field of jurisdiction in which, apart from that procedure, it could exert no legal authority; if, when examined as a whole, legislation in form criminal is found, in aspects & for purposes exclusively within the provincial sphere, to deal with matters committed to the provinces, it cannot be upheld as valid.

Reciprocal Insurance Act 1922, of Ontario, authorised any person to exchange, through the medium of an attorney, with persons, whether in Ontario or elsewhere, reciprocal contracts of insurance, subject to provisions as to licences & other conditions; & it was provided that actions in respect of such contracts might be maintained in the cts.

of the province. A Dominion Act of 1917 inserted in the Criminal Code (R. S. Can. 1906, c. 148), sect. 508c, by which it was made an indictable offence for any person to solicit or accept any insurance risk except on behalf of a co. or assocn. licensed under Insurance Act, 1917, of Canada. In answer to questions referred by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario to the Appellate Div.:—Held: (2) the Act of 1922 was intra vires the province, since (a) its provisions were capable of receiving a meaning according to which, whether enabling or prohibitive, they applied only to persons & acts within the territorial jurisdiction of the province, & (b) although it might incidentally affect aliens & dominion cos., it did not deal with them as such, but was an Act dealing with contracts of insurance; (3) the making & carrying out of contracts licensed pursuant to the Act were not rendered illegal, or otherwise affected, by Criminal Code, s. 508c; that sect. was invalid, since, in substance though not in form, it was in regulation of contracts of insurance, subjects not within the legislative competence of the Dominion; (4) the answers under (2) & (3) would be the same if any of the persons subscribing to a reciprocal insurance contract was (a) a British subject not resident in Canada immigrating into Canada, or (b) an alien. In so answering this question no opinion was expressed as to the competence of the Dominion Legislature to enact Insurance Act, 1917, ss. 11 & 12 (1), whereby restrictions were placed upon aliens & British cos. in the matter of carrying on insurance business in Canada; but sect. 12 (2) was held to be invalid in relation to the subject of immigration.—A.-G. 176a. — Protection of denominational schools—Meaning of Protestant.—The Quebec Legislature in 1903 passed an Act, 3 Edw. 7, c. 16, which provided that persons professing the Jewish religion should, for school purposes, be treated as Protestants & have the same rights & privileges; that their children should have the same right of education as Protestant children; & that school taxes paid by them should go to the support of the Protestant schools. Under statutes of Lower Canada consolidated in 1861 by 24 Vict., c. 15, there were outside the cities of Quebec & Montreal (the rural area) common schools & dissentient schools, & within those cities Roman Catholic separate schools & Protestant separate schools. British North America Act, 1867, by s. 93, conferred on Provincial Legislatures exclusive power to make laws in relation to education, but, by proviso 1, preserved “any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons had by law,” & by proviso 2 enacted that privileges conferred by law on separate Roman Catholic schools in Upper Canada should be extended to dissentient schools of Roman Catholics & Protestants in Quebec:—Held: (1) the word “Protestant” in the statutes consolidated in 1861 could not be construed as “non-Catholic,” & so as including Jews; & the Protestant community, though divided for certain purposes into denominations, was itself a denomination & capable of being regarded as “a class of persons” within British North America Act, 1867 (c. 3), s. 93 (1); (2) having regard to the provisions of the Act of 1861 as to management & control, the dissentient schools in the rural area, & the separate schools in the two cities, had rights & privileges within sect. 93, proviso 1, but that the common schools in the rural area had not, as although each school might in fact be controlled by persons of the faith of the majority, that was not a right or privilege which “a class of persons had by law”; (3) the Act of 1861 impliedly reserved the right of attendance at dissentient schools in the rural area to children of the religion of the dissentients; in any case sect. 93, proviso 2, of the Act of 1867 had that effect; (4) the provisions as to the management & control of separate schools in the two cities gave them a denominational stamp which could not be effaced by the attendance of a certain number of children of a divergent faith; (5) 3 Edw. 7, c. 16 (Quebec), although otherwise intra vires, was ultra vires so far as it would enable persons professing the Jewish religion to be appointed to the Protestant Board of School Comrs. in the cities of Quebec or Montreal or on any Protestant Board of Examiners, or take part with Protestants in the establishment of a dissentient school outside those cities, & except so far as it would confer the right of attendance at dissentient schools outside those cities upon persons of religious faith different from that of the dissentient minority; (6) it would be possible to frame legislation for establishing separate schools for non-Christians without infringing the rights of the two Christian communities, & that legislation so limited would be valid.—*HIRSCH v. 179a. Trade disputes.—Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, of Canada, provided that upon a dispute occurring between employers & employees in any of a large number of important industries in Canada the Minister for Labour for the Dominion might appoint a board of investigation & conciliation. The board was to make investigations, with power to summon witnesses & inspect documents & premises, & was to try to bring about a settlement; if no settlement resulted, they were to make a report with recommendations as to fair terms, but the report was not to be binding upon the parties. After a reference to a board, a lock-out or strike was to be unlawful & subject to penalties:—Held: the Act was not within the competence of the Parliament of Canada under British North America Act, 1867 (c. 3); it clearly was in relation to property & civil rights in the provinces, a subject reserved to the provincial legislatures by sect. 92 (13), & was not within any of the overriding powers of the Dominion Legislature specifically set out in sect. 91; the Act could not be justified under the general power in sect. 91 to make laws "for the peace, order, & good government of Canada," as it was not established that there existed in the matter any emergency which put the national life of Canada in anticipated peril.—TORONTO ELECTRIC COMRS. v. SNIDER, [1925] A. C. 396; 94 L. J. P. C. 116; 132 L. T. 738; 41 T. L. R. 238; 69 Sol. Jo. 325, P. C.

Sect. 4 (3), however, which provided that upon a vacancy occurring among the judges of the Appellate Div. or of the High Ct. Labour in industrial undertakings.—The matter of labour in industrial undertakings in Canada is primarily within the competence of provincial legislatures, but Parliament can legislate as to labour in territories not yet organised into, or forming part of, a province, & as to labour of servants of the Dominion, if these are within the scope of the draft convention adopted by the International Labour Conference of the League of Nations in 1919.—RE TREATY OF VERSAILLES, RE HOURS OF LABOUR, [1925] 3 D. 283a. Rule of English law as to parliamentary control of revenue—Application in New Zealand.—It is a principle of the British constitution, inherited in the constitution of New Zealand, that no money can be taken out of the Consolidated Fund into which the revenues of the State have been paid, except under a distinct authorisation by Parliament itself; a payment made without that authority is illegal & ultra vires, & the money, if it can be traced, can be recovered by the Govt.

An agreement made in 1913 provided

(inter alia) that the Minister of Railways of New Zealand, representing the Crown, should pay to applts. £7,500 when applts. granted a lease to B. & Co. The making of the agreement had been authorised by an Act of 1912, which empowered the Minister, without further appropriation, to pay to applts. out of the Public Works Fund such sum as might be payable in accordance with the agreement. Owing to an alteration in the scheme to which the agreement related, the Minister did not require applts. to grant the lease, & it was not granted. Nevertheless the £7,500 sq. Acts of local Legislatures—Extent of operation.—The United Provinces Ct. of Wards, like the Acts of many other local Legislatures dealing with the local Ct. of Wards, has no effect beyond the jurisdiction of its own Legislature. Civil Procedure Code (Act V. of 1908) gives a local Act local validity & special procedure validity in its own sphere. No local Legislature can prescribe procedure for any ct. beyond its territorial jurisdiction, & any Act passed by a local Legislature for its own ct. cannot be enforced beyond those territories.—CHIHATTOO LAL MISSEER v. 265a. Recognition of existing proprietary rights—Effect of proclamation.—After a sovereign State has acquired territory, either by consent, or by cession under treaty, or by the occupation of territory theretofore unoccupied by a recognised ruler, or otherwise, an inhabitant of the territory can enforce in the municipal cts. only such proprietary rights as the Sovereign has conferred or recognised. Even if a treaty of cession stipulates that certain inhabitants shall enjoy certain rights that gives them no right which they can so enforce. The meaning of a general statement in a proclamation that existing rights will be recognised is that the Govt. will recognise such rights as upon investigation it finds existed. The Govt. does not thereby renounce its right to recognise only such titles as it considers should be recognised, nor confer upon the municipal cts. any power to adjudicate in the matter.

Appls. brought a suit for a declaration that they were proprietors of certain lands situated within territory which in 1860 had been ceded to the British Govt. under a treaty:—Held: upon the facts, & applying the above principles, the suit failed.—VAJESINGJI JORAVARSINGJI v. PART IV.

s i. ——— Requisites of conversion to Hinduism.—In the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX. of 1925), the term "Hindu" is used in a theological, as distinguished from a national or racial sense. A person of non-Hindu origin can become a Hindu by conversion. Membership of a caste is not a necessary pre-requisite for being a Hindu. It is a question of fact in each case whether a given person is a Hindu or not. A European does not become a Hindu merely because he professes a theoretical allegiance to the Hindu faith, or is an ardent admirer & advocate of Hinduism, & its practices; but if he resides long in India, abdicates his religion by a clear act of renunciation, & adopts Hinduism by undergoing formal conversion, gives up, along with Christianity, his Christian name & deliberately assumes a Hindu name, marries, in accordance with Hindu religious rites, a person who is a Hindu by race & religion, & cuts himself off from his old environments, & takes to the Hindu mode of life, in such a case the Ct. may justly come to the conclusion that he is a Hindu within Indian Succession Act. A European who becomes a Hindu is governed by Hindu law, the test in such case being not domicile, but religion. MORARI v. ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL OF MADRAS (1928), 1 L. R. 52 Mad. 160.—IND.

ful appeal rendering possible prosecution of claim for larger sum.—Upon a dispute as to a contract for the sale of goods, arbitrators awarded Rs. 18,000 to petitioner & Rs. 3,900 to resps. The award in favour of petitioner having been set aside, he brought a suit to set aside the award in favour of resps. The appellate ct. in India made a decree dismissing the suit & refused to certify under Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 110, that the case was a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council in that it would "involve, directly or indirectly, some claim or question to or respecting property" of Rs. 10,000, or upwards. Petitioner contended that he had a right of appeal under the above words of sect. 110, since if the appeal succeeded he could proceed with a suit, which had been stayed, claiming Rs. 81,000 damages under the contract.—Held : without defining the meaning of "property" as used in sect. 110 petitioner's claim upon the contract was too remote to be considered as being property indirectly involved, & his petition should be dismissed.—*UDOYCHAND PANNALAL v. In every such case, where the valuation is less than the prescribed limit, there is no right of appeal to His Majesty in Council. It is only when a case is of larger importance & the principle when finally decided by the Privy Council will be of benefit, not only to the people who are directly involved, in the litigation, but to a considerable body of other people, that leave to appeal should be granted.—*RUCHHA SAITHWAR v. — Transference of liabilities of British Government to Irish Free State.—By agreements made in 1917, during the war with Germany, it was agreed between the British Govt. & resp. co., that the co. should make certain alterations in their railway lines in order to facilitate the carriage of coal from certain collieries for purposes connected with the war, the Govt. undertaking to reinstate the lines after the conclusion of the war. In 1922, Irish Free State (Agreement) Act, 1922 (c. 4), & Irish Free State Constitution Act, 1922 (session 2) (c. 1), were passed. At the date of the passing of these Acts the contracts with the Govt. were still executory:—Held: the effect of these Acts, & of the Orders made under them, was to transfer the liability under the contracts of 1917 from the British Govt. to the Govt. of the Irish Free State.—A.-G. v. - 336a. ———.—[A lunatic, at the date of her death in 1798, was entitled to certain funds in ct. representing the residuary estate of her father. In 1794 the master had reported that the lunatic had no heir-at-law or next of kin. In 1798 & 1801 the Crown made ex gratia grants of the funds to certain persons & obtained an indemnity in respect of the grants. In 1926 a petition was presented by persons claiming to be the next of kin of the lunatic for the payment to them of the whole of her personal estate. The parties sought a determination of the following questions: (1) whether the petition was maintainable on the assumption that no part of the funds ever came into the hands of or was dealt with by his present Majesty or his nominees or grantees or was carried to the Consolidated Fund; (2) whether the petition was barred by any Statute of Limitations; (3) whether in view of Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5, suppliants could proceed without serving the petition upon the successors in title of the persons to whom the ex gratia grants had been made:—Held: the first question must be answered in favour of suppliants.—Re MASON, [1928] Ch. 385; 97 L. - 127a. — — —.]—By an underlease lands & works were demised to the first defts. for the term of twenty-one years less one day. The underlease contained a covenant by these defts. that they would not assign, transfer or part with possession of the demised premises or any part thereof without the consent of the underlessor, & that in case of the breach of such covenant it should be lawful for the underlessor to re-enter upon the demised premises, & that thereupon the demise should absolutely determine. Pltf., the purchaser of the reversion on the underlease, brought an action to recover possession of the premises. By his statement of claim he alleged that the first defts., in breach of their covenant, had transferred, underlet or parted with the possession of the premises to the second defts., &/or the third defts. By their respective defences defts. traversed the allegations in the statement of claim. On a summons taken out by pltf. asking that the second defts. might be ordered to file a full & sufficient affidavit of documents, the judge, considering himself bound by Powis (Earl) v. Negus, No. 127, made the order asked for:—Held: there was one issue only between pltf. & the three defts., namely, whether the underlease, subject to which pltf. as he alleged derived his title to the possession of the land in question, was still subsisting or had been determined by the exercise by pltf. of his right of re-entry, & that being so, the well-established rule that the ct. would not assist a forfeiture by ordering discovery of documents applied, & the order made against the second defts. must be discharged. *Powis (Earl) v. Defts. denied liability alleging that the loss was due to pilferage by an organised band of thieves. Defts. had called for reports from the first, second, third, & fourth officers of the steamer, in order to investigate the question of the management of the vessel & the conduct of their officers in the prevention of theft, which reports were in due course obtained through defts.' agents in China. Defts. claimed that these reports were privileged from discovery :—Held : (1) the reports were not privileged. 891a. ———.]—In obedience to general instructions issued by the Port of London Authority to the masters of their vessels that, in the event of a casualty, the circumstances of the occurrence were to be reported on a printed form supplied for the purpose, the master of one of the Authority's dredgers reported the details of a collision with a sailing barge belonging to pltfs. The form was headed, "Confidential report for the information of the Authority's solr. . . ." The report was sent to the master's superior officers, who passed it on to the manager of the Authority's insurance department, & he in turn sent it to the solrs. who acted for the Authority's underwriters. Pltfs. contended that the report must be produced :—Held : there having been a collision it was to be anticipated that there would be litigation, & although the report went through various hands, it was made for the purpose of being put before the solrs.; the report therefore complied with the tests laid down by BUCKLEY, L.J., in *Birmingham & Midland Motor Omnibus Co. v. PART IV. SECT. 3.

f (p. 184) i. —.j.—Rule 267 (Sask.) provides that a person for whose immediate benefit an action is prosecuted or defended shall be regarded as a party for the purpose of examination in discovery, but where a party to the action wishes to avail himself of the rule & the pleadings do not disclose that the action has been brought for the immediate benefit of the person sought to be examined, the registrar is not in a position to say that the party seeking the appointment is entitled to examine such person, & he should therefore not issue an appointment without an order of the ct. or a judge.—Johnson v. Hawkes, [1924] 3 D. L. R. 524; [1924] 2 W. W. R. 965.—CAN.

f (p. 184) ii. —.j.—In order to obtain an order for the examination for discovery of a person who is not a party to the action, appct. must show that plff. in whose name the action was brought is not really plff., but that the person whose examination is asked for is the real plff. & that the action is being prosecuted for his benefit.—Canadian Credit Men's Trust Assocn. v. Morton, [1925] 1 W. W. R. 772.—CAN.

1705a. Shares—Refusal of company to register transfer—Grounds for refusal.—Art. 27 of a co.'s arts. of assocn. was as follows: "The directors may without assigning any reason decline to register any transfer of shares not fully paid up made to any person not approved by them or made by any member jointly or alone indebted or under any liability to the co." Pltf. was the holder of 10,000 partly paid cumulative preference shares of £1 each in the co., & in Dec. 1925, executed a transfer of 8,000 of these shares to a transferee. Registration of the transfer was refused, & pltf. brought an action claiming a declaration that deft. co. was not entitled to refuse registration of the transfer & rectification of the co.'s register accordingly. Earlier in 1925 the co. had issued debentures secured by a debenture trust deed, in which the co. covenanted with the trustees that it would not in regard to 100,000 preference shares register until the shares were fully paid any transfer of any of them to any proposed transferee not approved by the trustees, & would not, except with the previous written consent of the trustees, release any of the holders of these shares from any money payable or which might become payable in respect of such shares. Pltf. alleged by his statement of claim that deft. co. had wrongfully refused to register the transfer, that the directors did not exercise any proper discretion under the arts., & that they had abdicated their discretion by entering into the above covenant with the trustees. Defts. by their defence claimed to have exercised the discretion under the art. bonâ fide. Pltf. sought to interrogate deft. co. by asking: (1) Whether the co. said that the directors had declined registration in exercise of the power to decline to register any transfer made to any person not approved by them or in exercise of the power to decline to register any transfer by a member jointly or alone indebted to the co.; (2) whether they said that the transfer was to a person of whom the directors did not approve; (3) whether they said pltf. was in fact a person jointly or alone indebted to the co.; (4) whether the debenture trust deed was referred to by any one at any meeting at which the question of registering the transfer was discussed:—Held: all the interrogatories were proper to be allowed. Deft. co. was not entitled to refuse to state which of the grounds mentioned in the art. the directors had acted under, although it might refuse to say what reasons influenced them in exercising their discretion upon that ground.—SUTHERLAND (DUKE) v. - 424a. ———.]—The tenant of a dwelling-house hired goods from pltf. under a hire-purchase agreement, by which he agreed to pay punctually the instalments & also the rent of the premises on which the goods might be. By a clause of the agreement, in case of any breach, the owners might, by written notice, forthwith determine the agreement, & thereupon neither party thereafter should have any rights under it. The instalments being in arrear, pltf. served on the hirer a notice terminating the agreement, & claiming a return of the goods. A distress was subsequently levied on behalf of the landlord, & the goods the subject of the hire-purchase agreement were seized. In an action by the owners for illegal distress, the county ct. judge gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: as soon as the notice terminating the agreement was given the right of the hirer to possession of the goods was at an end, & neither party to the agreement had any rights under it. When the distress was levied there was therefore no hire-purchase agreement in force relating to the goods, & they were not at that time "comprised in any hire-purchase agreement" within Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908 (c. 53), s. 4, & the distress was illegal.—

The poundkeeper, without obtaining payment thereof, released the cattle to the owner on receipt of the latter's cheque, payment of which was stopped. On appeal by the owner the council of the municipality decided that the fence was not a lawful fence & that pltf. was not entitled to damages. Pltf. sued the poundkeeper & the municipality for the damages:—Held: pltf. was entitled as against both defts. to the damages claimed.—JOHNSON v. MUNICIPAL DISTRICT OF BEAVER DAM, [1925] 4 D. L. 196a. — Right reputed to be enjoyed with land.

—Pltf. at the date of the action was the owner in fee simple of certain plots of land in the village of C. in the county of Sussex, numbered on the Ordnance Survey Map 634, a portion of 635 & 636; also of a strip of land coloured brown on the plan on the conveyance to pltf., leading from the plot 634 & part of 635 to the high road running from C. to a common. Deft. became in Oct. 1926, the owner of other plots, numbered 652, 653, 654 & 618 in the same parish. Pltf. had previously purchased the strip coloured brown in 1925, the parcels being as follows: "All that strip of land leading from W. Fields"—which were the plots 652 & 653—"to the high road running from the village of C. to . . . C. common in the parish of P. . ."; the habendum being to pltf. in fee simple "to the use that the vendor his heirs & successors in title owner or owners . . . of the hereditaments coloured red"—which were the plots 634, 653 & 652—" . . . shall have full right & liberty . . . to pass & repass . . . over and along the piece of land coloured brown on the said plan . . ." Pltf. subsequently, in June, 1925, purchased at an auction sale the plots referred to above, 634, part of 635, 652 & 653; deft. also bought the plots numbers 618 & 654. The plots purchased by pltf., being Lot 24 in the sale, were described as including a right of way for all purposes over the brown strip. By that purchase pltf., having become the legal owner of the dominant & servient tenements, the right of way became merged. Pltf. subsequently contracted to sell plots 653 & 652 to deft. In the draft conveyance submitted to pltf.'s solrs. by deft.'s solrs., a right of way was inserted in favour of the purchaser (deft.) over pltf.'s land to the brown strip. This was struck out by the solrs. for the vendor (pltf.); & no grant was shown in the conveyance ultimately executed by the parties in Oct. 1926, of any right of way. Pltf. found later that deft. was passing over a track in plot 631 in order to make use of the brown strip for the purpose of taking farm carts from his own land over pltf.'s property to the high road; & he claimed a right of way. Pltf. sought a declaration that deft. was not entitled to any such right of way as he claimed, & further that the conveyance to deft. of plots 652 & 653 might be rectified by the express exclusion therefrom of any implied right of way which might arise under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 62:—Held: though the right to use the track was one reputed to be enjoyed with the land, that was plots 653 & 652, & to that extent deft. was entitled to succeed, yet pltf. was entitled to have the conveyance rectified. The evidence showed that neither pltf. nor deft. intended that any such right should pass on the conveyance of plots 653 & 652. The conveyance therefore would be rectified by the insertion therein of proper words limiting the implication of any right of way which might arise under the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 62.—CLARK v. BARNES, [1929] 2 Ch. 368.

—Two adjoining houses, originally belonging to one person, subsequently became vested in pltf. & deft. respectively. For some years before the severance of ownership, a creeper had been growing in what was now deft.'s garden with its foliage spreading along the wall of pltf.'s house. Also, again before the severance of ownership, the post of a gate leading from what was now deft.'s garden had been fastened by plugs & nails into pltf.'s wall. The growth of the creeper had from time to time reached pltf.'s gutter, & he had been obliged to cut it back. Pltf. brought an action for trespass in respect of the two above-mentioned acts, & the county ct. judge found both acts to be trespasses:—Held: both the growth of the creeper on pltf.'s wall & the fastening of the gate to pltf.'s wall would amount to trespasses, unless they could be justified by the existence of an easement; the implied reservation of an easement in a grant of property depends on the common intention of the parties; here there was no evidence that it was not the intention of the parties to the conveyance that creeper & gate-post should remain, & therefore an easement in each case was impliedly reserved; there was, however, a duty on the part of the grantee to use care that the grantor's property was not unduly interfered with; deft. in allowing the creeper to obstruct pltf.'s gutter had failed to use necessary care, & as to this part of the case the award as to damages must stand.—SIMPSON v. WEBER (1925), 133 L. T. 46; 41 T. L. R. 302, D. C.

210a. — Matter of convenience & not necessity.

—Where real property is severed by the grant of a part of it, there can be no implied reservation, in favour of the property retained, of an easement of convenience; but only of an easement of necessity.

Two adjoining messuages in a terrace, Nos. 28 & 30, in common ownership, were leased on a ninety-nine years' lease, which, in 1890, was assigned to G., who in 1901 assigned the lease of No. 30 to pltf.'s predecessors in title, without reserving expressly in favour of No. 28, the property retained, any right of way across the garden of No. 30. In 1904 G. assigned the lease of No. 28 to deft.'s predecessor in title. Pltf. claimed in the county ct. an injunction restraining deft. from crossing on a path across the garden of No. 30 from a gate in the fence between the two properties, to a gate opposite, which led into a passage-way giving access to the road in front of the terrace. Deft. claimed a right of footway across this path by reason of her occupation of No. 28. The county ct. judge found that both at the time when there was unity of possession of Nos. 28 & 30, & from the time when the lease of No. 30 had been assigned, the path had always been used for the limited purpose of removing dust & refuse & for bringing in coal, & for no other purpose. But he did not find whether this user was by pltf.'s leave & courtesy, or whether there was an apparent & continuous easement from some certain time. Confusing the dates & thinking that the lease of the alleged dominant tenement, No. 28, was first assigned, when in fact the lease of No. 30 was first assigned, he held that although deft. had no unrestricted right of way across the path, yet, in 1901, there was an implied grant of an apparent quasi-easement enuring to deft. for the limited purpose of removing refuse & bringing in coal, & he made a declaration to that effect:—Held: there was no evidence that on the grant in 1901 to the pltf.'s predecessor in title there was an implied reservation of a right of way in favour of deft. across the garden of pltf. for the removal of dust & refuse & the delivery of coal.—ALDRIDGE v. The leased property as described in the lease did not embrace this road, but the lessee claimed that he & prior occupiers of the leased house had the use of it, & as one of the named boundaries was the roadway, the lease impliedly gave him a right of way over it.—Held: the lessee was not entitled to the right-of-way.—BREADY v. The rear portions of pltf.'s & deft.'s lands abutted on a public lane, a strip of land between the fence erected on deft.'s land & the boundary of the lane being unenclosed. Pltf., for over 20 years, believing this strip to be a part of the lane, had been accustomed to drive over it to get to his stable, doing so in the exercise of a supposed right as one of the public, & not as an easement to his land.—Held: he had not acquired any right to use the strip.—ADAMS v. sd. —.—.]—Whether as of right or by permission.—Pltf. & deft. were the owners & occupiers of adjoining farms, & deft. claimed to have acquired, by prescription, a right of way over a road or track on pltf.'s property. The way over pltf.'s property had been used by deft. whenever he wished to visit his brother or whenever he wished to go past his brother's house into the main road. Deft. used the way for all the purposes for which he required to use it in connection with his farm. This user commenced at a time when pltf.'s farm was owned by deft.'s brother & continued through subsequent changes of occupancy until & since pltf. became the owner & occupier of the farm. Pltf. alleged & deft. denied that permission had been given to deft. to use the road, & that the use of the road by deft. was not as a right.—Held: deft.'s right of way over the road had been established.—AUSTIN v.  515. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph :—

— Acquiescence in obstruction of way.—

In 1870 a row of houses was put up for sale by auction in eleven lots. One of the conditions was that a strip of land fifteen feet in width, running the entire length of the lots & being the rear portions of the back gardens of the houses, was intended to form a right of way from the back garden of each house into Church Road, which bounded the side of lot 1 on the south, & that the lots would be sold subject to & with the benefit of such right of way, & that the respective purchasers should at the earliest possible moment remove the fifteen feet of end garden wall & form the right of way. This condition was recited in each of the conveyances. Lot 1 was conveyed subject to the right of way of the owners of the other lots & lots 2 & 3 with the benefit of & subject to the right of way. The purchaser of lot 1 let it for a term of fifty years, which expired on June 15, 1922, subject to the right of way. In 1904 pltf. took an assignment of this lease, & in 1911 he purchased the fee simple of lots 2 & 3, with the benefit & subject to the right of way. Deft. was the present owner of lot 1. For fifty years from the date of the original sale no attempt was made to form the proposed roadway, the garden walls dividing the several lots remained intact, & the wall separating lot 1 from Church Road was not breached. Church Road was six feet above the level of the back gardens. In 1883 the original lessee of lot 1 in the course of erecting some stables in his back garden raised the surface of the strip of land at the end of of Church Road, with the result that there was a drop of six feet from that strip into lot 2. In 1919 pltf., in anticipation of the expiration of his lease, proposed to build a garage on lots 2 & 3. With that object in view he pulled down part of the wall which separated the rear portion of lot 1 from Church Road & erected gates there, & he also raised the level of the rear portion of lot 2; & subsequently he caused a car to be driven through the gates over the strip in lot 1 into lot 2. On the expiration of the lease deft. blocked up the gates & obstructed the way. In an action by pltf. as owner of lots 2 & 3 to enforce his right of way against the deft. :—Held : (1) until the land was cleared there could be no effectual creation of a right of way; (2) having regard to the time which had elapsed before any purchaser attempted to assert his rights under the original conveyance, the inevitable inference was that the arrangement made in 1870 had been abandoned by common consent.—SWAN v. SINCLAIR, [1925] A. C. 227; 94 L. J. Ch. 104; 132 L. T. 577; 89 J. P. 38; 41 T. L. R. 158; 22 L. G. R. 705, H. L.

507 i. Non-user alone as presumption of abandonment.—Abandonment question of fact.—While mere non-user is not sufficient to amount to abandonment of a right of way, it is a fact to be taken into consideration, as it is from all such facts that the ct. has to decide whether or not a clear intention to abandon can be inferred or is indicated. Where pltf. & his predecessors in title had failed to exercise a right of way had fenced off their land, so as to shut off the right of way & had omitted any specific mention of the right in various conveyances :—Held : an abandonment was established.—*CHRISTOPHER v. The servient owner, suing by civil bill, claimed damages for the failure & refusal by the dominant owner to close the gate. 1399. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph:—

———. ———. ———. Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), s. 2, confers on the Ct. of Ch. jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction in the case of a threatened injury. Notwithstanding the repeal of that Act by Statute Law Revision & Civil Procedure Act, 1883 (c. 49), the combined effect of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 16, & Statute Law Revision Act, 1898 (c. 22), s. 1, is to maintain in force the jurisdiction conferred by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, s. 2.

Where therefore an action was brought in the Ch. Div. for an injunction to restrain an obstruction of ancient lights, & the ct. found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction.—LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. SLACK, [1924] A. C. 851; 93 L. J. Ch. 436; 131 L. T. 710; 40 T. L. R. 745; 68 Sol. Jo. 715, H. L.; reusg. S. C. sub nom. SLACK v. LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1923] 1 Ch. 431, C. A.; subsequent proceedings, [1924] 2 Ch. 475, C. A.

1399a. ———. ———. ———. In an action brought by pltf. against deft. society for an injunction & damages in respect of an alleged obstruction of ancient lights, the judge found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place,

& he expressed the opinion that the interference with pltf.'s legal rights when the building was completed would be small, & could be adequately compensated by damages, but held, contrary to his own opinion, that he was bound by the opinion of the Ct. of Appeal in Dreyfus v. Peruvian Guano Co. (1889), 43 Ch. D. 316, that there was no jurisdiction under Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), to give damages in lieu of an injunction where the injury was threatened but had not been sustained, & he therefore granted an injunction. The Ct. of Appeal, without going into the merits, by a majority, upheld the view that the ct. had no jurisdiction in such a case to award damages in lieu of an injunction. The House of Lords, by a majority, reversed this decision, & remitted the case to the Ct. of Appeal to deal with it on its merits:—Held: the findings of the judge brought the case within the "good working rule" suggested by A. L. SMITH, L.J., in Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., No. 1356, ante, as that which might guide the ct. in exercising the discretion given it by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, to award damages in lieu of an injunction; that was still the rule to be adopted by the ct. as a guide & was not affected by anything that was decided in Colls v. Home & Colonial Stores, No. 830, ante; therefore, there being evidence to support the findings of the judge, the injunction granted by him, contrary to his own opinion, ought to be discharged, & in lieu thereof an inquiry directed as to damages.—SLACK v. LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1924] 2 Ch. 475; 94 L. J. Ch. 46, C. A.

1406a. ———. Erection of building interfered with acquiesced in by defendant.—Where pltf. & deft. held adjoining pieces of ground under a common landlord, & pltf., with the licence of the landlord, & without objection by deft., had erected a manufactory, an injunction was granted to restrain deft. so building as to obstruct the lights of pltf.'s manufactory pending trial.—CROOK v. WILSON (1855), 3 W. R. 378.

— Approval of decorations & fittings.]
—On the hearing in the Consistory Ct. of London of a petition as to the furniture & fittings of the Church of St. Magnus-the-Martyr, in the City of London, a faculty was granted for, amongst other things: (1) a second Holy Table; (2) an image of the Virgin & Holy Child placed behind the second Holy Table; & (3) a crucifix fixed to a pillar at a considerable height from the floor & near the pulpit. On appeal the Ct. of Arches dismissed the appeal as to (1) & (3), but allowed it as to (2):—Held: (1) the law was the same for every kind of sacred image in a church, including a crucifix or rood, & although such an image was not illegal per se, it could not lawfully be placed in a church without a faculty.

On an application for such a faculty, the question to be considered is whether, if the faculty be granted, there is or is not, in the particular case, a danger of the image being used for purposes of worship or adoration condemned by Article of Religion 22. After discussion of the kind of evidence proper to this inquiry :—Held: (2) there was a danger of the proposed image of the Virgin & Holy Child being so used; (3) an image used for purposes of worship or adoration was an ornament & was illegal, because not included amongst the ornaments of the church sanctioned by the Ornaments Rubric in the Book of Common Prayer; (4) a faculty authorising the erection of an image in a church should not be absolute, but until further order.

(5) The other matter of appeal is the second Holy Table. The church holds, or will hold, between three hundred & four hundred people, & there are a large number of celebrations every week. In those circumstances it would be a matter of course to allow a second Holy Table, but for the exceptional character of the ceremonial & services of this church. I am not, however, disposed to interfere with the exercise of the learned Chancellor's discretion in this part of the case. I think there ought to be full plans & particulars of the decorations & fittings of & surrounding the second Holy Table, & these fittings ought to be subject to the approval of the learned Chancellor & to be specifically included in the faculty (SIR LEWIS DIBDIN).—VINCENT v. ST. MAGNUS THE MARTYR, ETC. (RECTOR & CHURCHWARDENS), [1925] P. 1; sub nom. ST. MAGNUS THE MARTYR, LONDON BRIDGE, 41 T. L. R. 3.

3513b. Cost of investment of redemption money—Compulsory redemption—Jurisdiction of court to deal with.]—By a settlement dated in 1893 certain tithe rentcharges payable out of lands situate at W. were settled, subject to certain life interests which had determined, to the use of H. for life with remainders over. The settlement contained a proviso appointing the trustees of the settlement trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, & providing that a sole trustee should be competent to act for all the purposes of the Acts, including the receipt of capital money. In 1899 H. assigned his life interest in the rentcharges to C. In 1905 C. died, having by his will devised his real & personal estate to resps. & appointed them his exors. In 1922 applt., who was the owner of the land out of which certain of the tithe rentcharges were payable, in exercise of the power given him by Tithe Act, 1918 (c. 54), s. 3, applied to the Ministry of Agriculture & Fisheries for the redemption of certain of these charges, amounting to £48 10s. 8d. & 5s. respectively, & for the determination by the Minister of the amount of the consideration money payable in respect thereof. On Sept. 20, 1922, resps., in exercise of their option under Tithe Act, 1846 (c. 73), s. 9, signed a form of consent which had been sent to them by the Ministry to the payment of the consideration money to the surviving trustee of the settlement of 1893. A month later they wrote to the Ministry revoking their consent & requesting that the money might be paid into ct. The Ministry thereupon wrote to applt. directing him to pay the money into ct., which he accordingly did. On Feb. 12, 1923, resps. took out an originating summons for an order that the fund in ct. might be invested & the income therefrom paid to resps. or the survivor of them as & when received during the life of the tenant for life :—Held : (1) on an application to invest money paid into ct. representing compensation paid under the Tithe Acts on the redemption of rentcharges, there was no general principle that required the ct. to direct that the person exercising the compulsory powers under the Acts should bear the burden of the costs, but the costs were, under Jud. Act, 1890 (c. 44), s. 5, in the discretion of the ct. entirely unfettered by any such general principle; the ct. below ought to have exercised its discretion by holding that applt., who had been brought before the ct. solely for the purpose of making him liable for costs, was not so liable, & to have dismissed the application as against him with costs.

(2) Semble : there is no power in the Tithe Acts which enables a tithe owner who has once exercised the option given him by the Act of 1846, s. 9, to revoke or alter the exercise of it.—Re WARTLING TITHE REDEMPTION, [1924] 2 Ch. 123; 93 L. Although an Act constituting such a corp. does not expressly give power to borrow or to erect a church, but does expressly give power to mortgage, the power to borrow for the purpose of erecting a church is implied, since the erection of a church is the principal reason for the incorporation. — LEONARD v. This congregation continued to use the church, & some of the original trustees having died, appointed new trustees to act with the survivors, & those trustees refused to give up possession to the representative of what had been declared to be the true body:—Held: the trustees must be treated as being trustees for the true body, who were entitled to enforce the trust & to have possession of the church, & it was not necessary to organise another congregation & appoint new trustees for that congregation under Religious Institutions Act.—BREWSTER v. 14a. — — — — —.]—Pltfs., assistant teachers in the employ of deft. council, claimed injunctions to restrain the council from acting on resolutions to dismiss them from their employment & notices sent to them in pursuance thereof. The council were in financial difficulties, & had approached the Minister of Health with a view to obtaining a further loan. This had been refused, unless the finances were placed on a sound footing & expenses reduced. With a view to achieving this result they appointed a sub-committee with full powers to scrutinise expenditure & effect reductions & savings. This committee recommended that pltfs., who were remunerated on the Burnham scale, should have their engagements determined by notice. Acting in pursuance thereof the committee passed the resolutions complained of, & notices were sent out determining the contracts signed by their clerk :—Held : (1) it was clear that it had become necessary to practise strict economy, & judicial notice could be taken of the fact that at the time pltfs. were remunerated on the highest scale of the Burnham award. The council in considering these questions were acting in pursuance of their statutory obligations, & no objection could be entertained as to the validity of the notices on the ground of motive. (2) There was power to delegate under 1921 Act, s. 4 (2), & the committee had vested in them the duty of ascertaining how best savings could be brought about. On their report the notices of dismissal had been prepared & sent to pltfs., signed by the clerk of the council. That was a sufficient ratification of what the committee had done, & pltfs.' claim failed.—RICHARDSON v. ABERTILLERY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, THOMAS v. SAME (1928), 138 L. T. 688; 92 J. P. 59; 44 T. The expenses so incurred were disallowed by the district auditor on the ground that the local education authority had no statutory authority to expend money on alterations or improvements of a schoolhouse not provided by them. On a case stated by the Minister of Health under Audit (Local Authorities) Act, 1927 (c. 31), s. 2:—Held: the concrete paving or flagging of the playgrounds was not an alteration or improvement in the buildings, & that therefore the obligation to pay for such work was not thrown upon the managers of the schools by Education Act, 1921 (c. 51), s. 29 (2) (d), but the local educa-

sm. — Improper dealings with trust funds—Action—Whether attorney (general necessary party).—In an action by an incorporated educational institute for the removal of one of the trustees, who also acted as secretary, for alleged improper dealing with the corporate funds, judgment was given, but without any finding of wilful misconduct, directing such trustee's removal, on the ground that so much doubt was cast upon his dealings with the trust funds that it would not be proper to allow him to remain a member of the board. Such an action is maintainable without making the A.G. a party.—WILBERFORCE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTE v. HOLDEN (1887), 17 O. R. 439.—CAN.

so. — Neglect of duty—Proceedings for removal informal—One applicant not ratepayer.—Although on an appeal by school trustees from a judgment removing them from office the Ct. of Appeal agreed with the judge appealed from that applicants had been guilty of a neglect of duty in disregarding School Act, R. S. S. 1920, c. 110, with respect to procuring a new site for a school house, it was held, nevertheless, that the appeal must be allowed on the ground, raised apparently for the first time in the notice of the appeal, that one of the five persons by whom the proceedings for removal were commenced was not at the time they were commenced on the last revised assessment roll for the district, & therefore, was not a "ratepayer" within the meaning of sect. 124 of the Act.—[1928] sq. Appointment of trustee—Whether valid—Made at annual meeting of ratepayers—No notice of special business.—The election of a trustee at the annual meeting of ratepayers in question herein to fill a vacancy on the board caused by resignation was held invalid, since by School Act, R. S. S. 1920, c. 110, s. 125, such a vacancy must be filled at a special meeting; & since sect. 92 (2) requires the notice of a special meeting to set forth its purpose, & the notice of said annual meeting made no mention of the election of a trustee to fill the vacancy, it could not be said that the annual meeting was such a special meeting.—LACOURSE v. McLELLAN & DE GRAY, [1928] 3 W. W. R. 680.—CAN.

17 l. Negligence of education authority—Defective state of playground.—Appls. planted a number of young trees upon a portion of the playground of a school under their control, & erected wooden stakes with sharp & jagged points round each tree. These stakes were pressed into the ground & brought together at the top in the form of a pyramid. The area covered by the trees had become overgrown with grass, & in that area a hole had been dug, & the earth heaped up at the side of it, forming a mound two or three feet in height. Resp.'s daughter, a child of six years, when playing fell on one of the stakes, which pierced her eye.—Held: appls. had been negligent in not taking steps to obviate the danger, & were liable in damages.—*TRANSVAAL PROVINCIAL ADMINISTRATION v. o i. — Supervision of rifle-shooting competition.—A school board has a duty to see that the school premises are not used in a manner dangerous to the children. If it authorises or permits a shooting competition with rifles in the course of school sports on a holiday granted for such purpose, it must provide efficient supervision, including efficient inspection of the rifles used, & a breach of that duty will subject it to damages for injury to a boy caused through his having a defective rifle.—*WALTON v. Two years after the transfer, the education authority altered the system & began to conduct it in sequence with a neighbouring school. In an action against the education authority at the instance of the former trustees.—Held: under Education (Scotland) Act, 1918, s. 18 (3), defenders were bound to hold, maintain, & manage the transferred school as a public school of the same character & status as at the date of the transfer & provide similar instruction to that provided at that date.—*NORRIS v. The Authority refused to accept the proposed transfer, & in an action of declarator brought by the trustees, maintained that its consent was a condition precedent to a valid transfer :—Held : the determination of the question whether the Education Authority was bound to accept the transfer depended upon the construction to be given to above subsect. ; it did not expressly, or by necessary implication, impose any obligation on the Authority to accept a transfer against its will, even where such transfer had been consented to by the Education Department, the assumption being that the transfer should have been agreed on by the transferor & the transferee before the Department was asked for its consent.—*BONNYBRIDGE ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOL v. The boy had passed out of the primary school, & there was no secondary school within three miles of his place of residence. The education authority offered to pay an allowance towards the cost of conveying the boy to a secondary school. The father refused the offer :—Held : the father had a “reasonable excuse” for failure to provide education within Education (Scotland) Act, 1883 (c. 56), s. 11.—MACKENZIE v. SMITH, [1927] S. C. If, however, parents sought to find a reasonable excuse outside the named categories (a), (b) & (c), the tribunal were not bound to accept it; the tribunal must decide whether the facts, in their opinion, showed a reasonable excuse.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. 302a. — — — Bonâ fide exercise of discretion.]—A local education authority has power to dismiss a married woman teacher in a public elementary school on the ground that, in the bonâ fide exercise of their discretion, they have come to the conclusion that it is impossible for her to look after her domestic concerns & effectively & satisfactorily to act as a teacher at the same time.—SHORT v. POOLE CORPN., [1926] Ch. 66; 95 L. J. Ch. 110; 134 L. T. 110; 90 J. P. 25; 42 T. L. R. 107; 70 Sol. Jo. 245; 24 L. G. R. 14, C. A.

302b. — — — Onus of proof.]—The council of deft. borough, as the local education authority, in pursuance of a recommendation of their education committee, made after exhaustive inquiries & discussion, resolved that the engagements of all married women teachers falling under certain specified categories should be terminated; &, accordingly, notice was given to each of plffs. to terminate her engagement. Plffs., three married women, had for several years been engaged under contracts terminable by a month's notice on either side, as assistant certificated teachers in some of defts.' schools, & were admittedly efficient teachers. It was proved that the object of the council in reducing the number of the married women teachers was to create vacancies for unemployed single women teachers whom the council trained for the teaching profession & for whom it was important in the interest of educational efficiency that teaching posts should be provided. In carrying out that policy, the council, with the view of minimising cases of hardship in the selection of married women teachers for dismissal, took into consideration the domestic circumstances & duties of the married women teachers & the earning capacity of their husbands. Plffs. sought declarations that the notices of dismissal were invalid on the ground that the council in giving them did not act bonâ fide with the intention of discharging their statutory duties of maintaining educational efficiency, but acted with the illegitimate object of providing employment for unmarried women without reference to educational efficiency, of obliging married women teachers to confine themselves to home duties & of preventing those whose husbands were in regular employment from increasing the income of the joint home:—Held: (1) plffs. failed to discharge the onus which lay upon them of showing that the policy adopted by the council of reducing the number of the married women teachers for the purpose of creating vacancies for unemployed single women teachers, & the steps taken to carry it out, were in excess of their statutory powers or were adopted or taken in pursuance of some illegitimate object; (2) the matters taken into consideration by the council were not irrelevant from an educational standpoint, but were material factors in determining, not only whether the policy ought to be adopted, but the best method of applying it; (3) as defts. had acted bonâ fide & within their statutory powers, the action ought to be dismissed.—*FENNELL v. 315 i. Injury to pupil—Allowed access to dangerous substance.]—A national school contained two class-rooms, one for the junior & one for the senior class. During the luncheon hour the junior class were sent out-of-doors to the playground, & deft., who was the teacher of the senior class, used to allow the junior class to come into his class-room & warm themselves at the fire. He was under no obligation to allow the junior class into his room; he merely did it out of kindness to the children, & so that they would not have to remain outside in the severe weather. On one occasion he temporarily removed the fire screen which usually guarded the fire in his room, & the junior class coming into his room as usual, & going to the fire, the clothes of one of them, a child of six years of age, caught fire, & she was severely burned:—Held: deft. was liable.—*BOHANE v. S. 1920, c. 89, the failure to comply with the requirements of the Act as to posting notices of the poll "did not affect the result of the election" is on the person upholding the election.

Under said Act the notice of poll is required to be posted in at least two widely separated conspicuous places in each division of the municipality. In the present case no notice at all was posted in one of the divisions, a number of voters in that division did not vote, & resp. was declared elected by one vote:—Held: it could not be said that the omission to post the notice did not affect the result, & the election was declared invalid & resp. unseated.—R. v. 1145a. ——— Omission of parish for which nominee qualified.]—The nomination papers of four persons nominated for election as rural district councillors merely stated in column 5, under the heading “how qualified,” that the persons nominated were “local government electors,” & did not state the name of the parish for which they were qualified as local government electors, as required by Rural District Councillors Election Order, 1898, r. 4. The deputy returning officer rejected the nomination papers as being invalid, because the parish within the poor law union for which qualification was claimed was not stated. Upon an election petition:—Held: (1) the omission to state in the nomination paper the name of the parish for which the person nominated was qualified as a local government elector was a non-compliance with Rural District Councillors Election Order, 1898, r. 4; (2) that defect was not cured by Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), s. 13, because that sect. only applied to a case where there had been a wrongful admission of a nomination paper, & did not apply to a case where a nomination paper had been rejected; (3) neither was the omission an “inaccurate description” of the person nominated within r. 33 of the 1898 Order, but was a non-compliance with the requirements of r. 4 of that Order, & therefore was not cured by r. 33.—BALDWIN v. statute & by contract, to receive from the S. borough council a supply of electrical power, but were deprived of this supply on certain days in May, 1926, when the general strike was in operation. In respect of this deprivation of supply pltf's. sued defts., who were the members of the Electricity Supply Committee of the S. borough council, to whom the council had lawfully delegated the management of the electricity supply, alleging that defts. had wrongfully & maliciously conspired & combined among themselves & with the London District Committee of the Electrical Trades Union to procure & induce the borough council, its servants & agents, to discontinue the supply of electrical power to pltf's. The writ in the action was issued on Jan. 13, 1927. Defts. denied pltf's. allegations, & pleaded Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61). At the trial it was proved that at the end of Apr. 1926, when the general strike was threatened, the Govt. made preparations for the maintenance of essential services & offered to provide naval ratings to take the place of workers who might go on strike. The Govt. also issued an Emergency Order relieving the S. borough council from its obligation to supply the whole of the previous requirements of consumers of power by 50 per cent. Defts. did not accept the Govt.'s offer of naval ratings to work the electricity plant, considering it unwise to do so in view of the likelihood of disorder in the borough; but they discussed the position with the Trades Union Council & eventually resolved that if the union workers would continue the supply of light they would abandon the supply of power. The result of this was that the supply of power to pltf's., as to all other occupiers of premises in the borough, was discontinued, whereby pltf's. suffered damage. The jury found that defts. in making the agreement whereby power was not supplied to pltf's. were not acting in good faith & in the honest belief that they were carrying out their statutory duties, & that they were actuated by an indirect motive to injure pltf's. & to further the interests of those taking part in the strike. Upon these findings judgment was entered for pltf's. Defts. appealed:—Held: there was no evidence to support the jury's findings.—SCAMMELL G. & NEPHEW, LTD. v. HURLEY, [1929] 1 K. B. 419; 98 L. J. GRIFFIN, [1928] Ch. 171; 97 L. J. Ch. 139; 138 L. T. 516; 92 J. P. 5; 44 T. L. R. 132; 26 L. G. R. 38.

p 1. — At fixed rate for definite period—Whether valid.—In the absence of an express or necessarily implied grant of power to pltf. town to contract to supply electric energy from its

- 42a. — Supply to premises partly outside area—Point of supply within area.—Defts. were authorised by the County of London (Northern Extensions) Electric Lighting Order, 1897, made under Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 (c. 56) & 1888 (c. 12), to supply electricity within an area adjoining the relators' area of supply. Sect. 6 of the Order prohibited the supply of energy by defts. beyond their area of supply, & Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 23, contains a general prohibition against supplying energy outside an authorised area. Defts. entered into a contract to supply a firm having a small part of its premises within defts.' area of supply & the remainder of the premises in the relators' area of supply. For the purpose of this contract defts. erected their apparatus on the part of the premises of the firm within their area, & the consumers' terminals, that is, the point where the electricity was passed from defts.' service lines to the lines on the firm's premises owned & controlled by them, were also on that part of the premises. The use of electricity on this part of the premises was trivial. In the circumstances the A.-G. brought an action on the relation of the relators to restrain defts. from supplying energy to the firm outside their area:—Held: the point of supply was the consumers' terminals, & as the firm's terminals were within defts.' area, defts. had not committed any breach of the prohibitions in their Order & the Act of 1909.—A.-G. v. COUNTY OF LONDON ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., [1926] Ch. 542; 95 L. J. Ch. 357; 135 L. T. 601; 42 T. L. R. 328; 70 Sol. Jo. 486.

— Not incompatible with performance of statutory duties.—By a Provisional Order of 1898 the B. Council were constituted electricity undertakers in B. with power to charge up to a certain maximum price, but with authority to make special agreements with particular consumers as to price. By a transfer deed of Dec. 31, 1901, approved by the Board of Trade, the B. Council transferred the undertaking to defts. with a provision for retransfer if defts. made default in their obligations as undertakers. By a supplemental deed of same date, made without the approval of the Board of Trade, defts. agreed with the B. Council not to charge higher prices than those charged in the adjoining borough of S. In 1911 the B. district & the contractual rights of the B. Council were transferred to pltf's., the S. Corp'n., but defts. still remained electricity undertakers in B. Defts. having recently begun to charge higher prices than pltf's., pltf's. brought an action to restrain their breach of agreement. Defts. contended that their agreement was ultra vires both under Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 11,

which prevented them from divesting themselves of their statutory powers without the consent of the Board of Trade, & also under the general law applicable to statutory undertakings:—Held: the agreement was a business transaction into which depts. might reasonably enter; it did not fetter the powers of depts. & was not incompatible with the performance by them of their statutory duties, & was not therefore ultra vires.—*SOUTHPORT CORPN. v. expressly make depts. liable for a nuisance, but (2) as depts. had not proved the nuisance to be the inevitable result of the exercise of their statutory powers ptlf. was entitled to an injunction & damages.—*MANCHESTER CORPN. v. 192 iv. ————]—In April, 1923, pltf. co. entered into an agreement in writing with B. for a lease to the co. for five years of certain land. B. died in Feb. 1924. This action was brought on May 20, 1924, against the exors. of B. & against G., to whom the exors. had, in May, 1924, agreed to sell the same land; & the M. co., to which the land was (by direction of G.) conveyed by the exors. of B. on July 13, 1921, was added as a deft. Pltf. co. claimed specific performance of its agreement with B., a declaration that its rights were paramount to the rights of defts., in the land, & in the alternative damages for delay in carrying out the agreement & for breach thereof. A certificate of hospensus was registered on May 21, 1924. On May 20, 1924, which was after the making of the second agreement, but before its registration on that day, defts. received notice of the claim made by pltf. co. Defts. G. & the M. co. contended that they were purchasers in good faith without notice of pltf. co.'s claim & were entitled to the benefit of the Registry

Act, R. S. O. 1914, c. 124, ss. 71, 72, 73 & 75. —Held: sect. 71 was applicable to the facts of the case; at the time of the purchase these defts. had no actual notice of pltf. co.'s claim or agreement, & their agreement was registered before pltf. co.'s—in fact the latter was never registered at all—& the provisions of the Act afforded them a complete defence, but, leaving aside the provisions of the Registry Act, defts. had the better equity.—PARAMOUNT THEATRES, LTD. v. In 1877 the freeholds, the undivided share in which was devised to P. for life, were sold under Leases & Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (c. 120), & the proceeds of sale representing such share were paid into ct. After the sale W., who had previously executed a disentailing deed dealing in general terms with the lands devised to him by testator's will, executed another disentailing deed dealing in terms with the undivided share & the money in ct. resulting from the sale thereof. Neither of these deeds was executed with the consent of P. as the protector of the settlement. The trustees declined to accept the trust. All the cestuis que trust then executed a deed of trust, by which they agreed to divide the property into two classes. Class 1 was to be sold immediately, to pay testator's debts. Class 2 was to be held by the trustees named, in trust for the purposes of the will, so far as not inconsistent with the trust deed, to pay the rents accruing to the parties as entitled under the will, & with power to a majority of the trustees to sell even within the nineteen years, at the end of which period, however, the property was to be sold absolutely, & the proceeds divided as the will directed. B. died before the end of the nineteen years:—Held: (1) under the trust deed there was a conversion out & out of class 1 from the date of that deed; but that there was a conversion of class 2 only at the end of the nineteen years, or, if sold before that period, then at the time of such sale; & the intermediate rents of the part remaining unsold went to those entitled to the real estate; (2) semble: under the will taken by itself, there was no conversion till the end of the nineteen years of that part of the real property which was then unsold, any conversion possible before that period being only for a certain limited purpose, that is, to pay debts of testator.—*FERRIE v. In the events which happened the material limitations of the will resulted as follows: To the use of E., T. & J. successively for life in the order named, with remainder to the use of E., T. & J. as tenants in common in tail general, with cross-remainders between them in tail general, with remainders over. In 1867 part of the land was sold & the proceeds invested in mtge. of freehold land. In 1871 E. died leaving an only daughter. In 1881 T. died a bachelor. In 1898 the surviving trustee foreclosed, & in 1899, by a deed appointing a new trustee to which J. was party, the foreclosed land was conveyed to the uses & upon the trusts of the will as if the same had been thereby specifically devised. On the death of J. in 1916 without issue, his executrix, who was also executrix of T., claimed that the foreclosed land in fact represented personality & was subject to a trust for sale by Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9, & that she was entitled to two-thirds of the proceeds. in tail under the limitations of the will, E., T. & J. never having disentailed:—Held: (1) owing to the power to vary investments, the crucial time for determining the character of each investment was the death of J., the surviving tenant for life, & that the mtgs. having been then foreclosed the mere foreclosure operated as a reconversion of the property into realty, & that there was no equity on the part of any cestui que trust under the will to have the personal character of the investment restored to it; (2) by the deed of 1899, to which all the parties able to control the character of the investment of the trust fund were parties, the foreclosed land was duly adopted as real estate & settled to the uses of the will; (3) although Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9 (5), may apply to land foreclosed before the commencement of the Act & remaining at the passing of the Act in the condition determined by the foreclosure, it would be unreasonable to extend the retrospective operation of the section to a case like the present where previously to the commencement of the Act the foreclosed land had been definitely accepted & settled as land & rights acquired thereby; (4) even if, by virtue of sub-sect. 5, Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9, was to be deemed to apply to foreclosed lands as from the date of foreclosure, the terms of both sub-sects. 3 & 4 had in the present case been complied with sufficiently to prevent the reconversion of the land into money under sub-sects 1 & 2; (5) the foreclosed land had become legally vested in the daughter of E. in tail as the heir in tail of E.—Re BOGG, ALLISON v. PAICE, [1917], 2 Ch. 239; 86 L. J. Ch. 536; 116 L. T. 714.

There was no issue of the marriage. The real estate was not sold in the lifetime of the wife, who accepted the benefits under her husband's will & died in 1921:—Held: inasmuch as at his death testator's interest was a contingent reversionary interest in personalty, contingent upon the event of no posthumous child being born who might attain a vested interest, & reversionary because it was expectant upon his wife's life interest, testator was not competent to effect a reconversion by his will, because he never became entitled to an absolute interest in the property before his death, & the property passed under his will as personalty.—Re STURT, DE BUNSEN v. sp. Widow taking different interests under will.—Under S's will his widow took absolutely thirty-four acres devised to her worth $1,000; she also took for life his house & lot garden worth about $1,500, but subject to a son's & a daughter's right "to have a home" there "as long as they are single." The son took absolutely the rest of testator's land worth about $3,500, & at the widow's death took "the house & lot & garden" also:—Held: the widow was not put to her election.—Re SEYMITH (1925), 57 O. PART X. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2.
 1691 ii. — [—]—P. in Feb. 1921, conveyed certain lands to a trust co., & by a declaration of trust of even date, accepted by the trust co., declared certain trusts upon which the lands were to be held. P.'s wife was to have a life interest in three of the parcels conveyed, & certain other benefits, & at her death the property was to be distributed among P.'s children; this life interest was to be in lieu of dower in all P.'s lands. On Feb. 21, 1921, P., by letter, requested the trust co.

to sign a declaration of trust to the effect that it held one of the parcels of land conveyed to it, in which the wife was given a life interest, in trust, for payment to an investment society of $7,500 "which pays off the loan on stock for that amount held by my wife," & this the trust co. did. By P.'s will, made on the date of the execution of the conveyance & declaration, he appointed the trust co. his exor. & trustee. The wife took nothing under the will. P. died in July, 1921. In Jan. 1923, the trust co. made a mtge. in favour of an assurance co. upon three of the properties in which the widow claimed a life estate, to secure repayment of a large sum of money which was advanced to the trust co. & which the trust co. applied in paying off loans made to P. In an action by the widow against the assurance co. for a declaration as to her rights under the trust deed & declaration & for other relief:—Held: pltf. having taken & continued in possession of the properties in which she claimed to have a life interest, had elected to take the benefits given to her by the trust deed & declaration, & was, therefore, tenant for life of the three properties referred to.—PURDON v. PART XI. SECT. 1.

1743 i. Satisfaction defined.—Satisfaction is the donation of a thing, with the intention, either expressed or implied, that it is to be taken, either wholly or in part, in extinguishment of some prior claim of the donee. The doctrine has no application to cases where the prior portion has actually been transferred or paid.

One whose life was insured assigned to his son a portion of the insurance moneys $1,000, in consideration of an undertaking by the son to advance from time to time moneys necessary to pay parts of the premiums. Subsequently the insured made his will by which he gave to his son $1,000 "out of the money payable at my death out of my life insurance policy":—Held: the $1,000 given by the will could not be regarded as a satisfaction of the $1,000 assigned to the son.—Re MARKS (1921), 64 D. sp. By payments to legatee in testator's lifetime.—Held: a sum of money paid by testator to persons to whom he had bequeathed one-half of his effects, was an anticipated payment of their provision, & not a donation.—BUCHANAN v. CRAWFORD (MOLLISON) (1824), 2 Sh. Sc. App. 445.—SCOT.

1873a ———.]—There is no such obligation, according to the rules of equity, on a mother to advance or make a provision for her child, as in the case of a father; & therefore, when a mother makes a purchase or investment in the name of her child, or in the joint names of herself & her child, that does not of itself afford the presumption of advancement; in such a case the intention to advance is a question of evidence.—BENNET v. 2006a ———.]—The principle deducible from the dictum of the Ct. of Appeal expressed in *Re Scott, Langton v. where a testator gave his residuary estate in trust for his children living at the period of distribution & the children of any child then dead, grandchildren are not liable, upon claiming their deceased parents' share, to bring into account a debt owing by the parent to testator's estate.—Re BINNS, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. The will did not contain any direction to pay debts. At the date of the debtor's death there was interest due & unpaid in respect of the debt. The exors. of the deceased paid the creditor the amount of the legacy & interest on the debt, up to the date of payment. The creditor then sued for the amount of the debt:—Held: the rule, that a legacy to a creditor of an amount equal to or greater than the debt owed by the testator to the creditor operated as a satisfaction of the debt, applied notwithstanding that there was interest due & unpaid in respect of the debt at the date of testator's death.—FITZGERALD v. so. Gift made within three years before death—Money spent on improving house—Whether gift to wife.—A husband & wife, with their children, lived together in a house which belonged to the wife; each enjoyed a separate income. The husband paid to a builder with whom he had made contracts about £2,000 for improvements & repairs to the house. A few months later he died at the age of fifty-three. It was found that the transaction was not entered into with intent to diminish the value of the husband's estate, but that the object was simply to improve the family home in accordance with their means & station in life; & that there was no reason to believe that the husband would not enjoy the normal span of life, or that he would necessarily predecease his wife.—Held: the payments did not constitute a gift to the wife of the deceased within Death Duties Act, 1921, of New Zealand, ss. 38, 39, so as to be deemed to be part of the husband's estate for the purposes of that Act.—*FINCH v. as the survivor should by will or deed appoint, & in default of appointment for the children as therein provided. The settlor died in 1925, without having exercised the joint power of appointment, leaving his wife & children him surviving. For the purpose of death duty under the Stamp Duties Act, 1920–1924, of N. S. - 90a. ——— Trust established in England.—By his will, made in English form, testator, who declared that the instrument was to take effect according to the law of Hong Kong where he was domiciled, devised & bequeathed his property, which was situate out of the United Kingdom, to trustees on trust to invest a sum to produce an annuity for his wife, to pay certain legacies & to stand possessed of the residue to pay the annual income thereof to his sons or son during their or his lives or life, & on the death of the last survivor of his sons in trust for his son's children. The tenant for life, who was the only son of testator living at his death, wished to borrow money &, at the request of the lenders, he appointed, in England, four new trustees of the will, three of whom were resident in England. Between 1913 & 1922, owing to the tenant for life's dealings with the trust funds, proceedings in the Ch. Div. were instituted & orders were made in connection with the administration of the trusts of the will. In 1922 the tenant for life died, leaving him surviving his widow & two infant sons, who were domiciled in Hong Kong but had been made wards of ct. by virtue of the proceedings in the Ch. Div. & the orders made therein. The trust property was situate abroad:—Held: the succession of the infants to testator's residuary estate was at his death a succession by virtue of Hong Kong law & to Hong Kong property, & it had never lost that character or fallen within 1853 Act, s. 2, & the property was not liable to estate duty under 1894 Act, s. 2 (2).—*A-G. v. The certificates were in all cases situate in London, & the securities themselves were transferable in London at the outbreak of war, & at the date of testator's death. Testator died in 1915, in Berlin, being domiciled in Germany. By his will three-fifths of his property were bequeathed to German & Austrian beneficiaries, & two-fifths to British & Polish beneficiaries. In 1915 the will was proved in Germany by the exors. named therein. In 1922, grant of administration in England was made to pltf. By virtue of Treaty of Peace Orders, the whole of the interests of the German & Austrian beneficiaries became charged with & subject to the claims of the Custodian of Enemy Property. In 1922 all the South African securities were transferred to the South African Custodian, an exor. dative was appointed in South Africa to administer testator's South African estate, & estate duty in South Africa was paid by him in respect thereof. Some of the American securities were transferred to the American Alien Property Custodian, administration of testator's American estate was granted in America, & the securities were transferred to the American Custodian to be distributed by the American administrator among the beneficiaries. All the remaining American securities, with the exception of a small balance, were released to pltf. by the English Custodian. In May, 1924, pltf. filed a corrective affidavit, including therein those of the American securities which had been released to him at that date, & he paid estate duty & interest in respect thereof:—Held: (1) all the shares were locally situate in England & the administrator was bound to include them as property of which testator was competent to dispose, & was accountable to the extent of the assets he had received for the estate duty in respect thereof; (2) the basis of valuation of such shares was the price similar shares would fetch in the open market at the date of testator's death.—*Re ASCHROTT, CLIFTON v. Discharge by son o. ———— —A father granted a bond for £30,000 in implement of an undertaking by him in his second son's marriage contract, in contemplation of the son's marriage, & in consideration of a conveyance executed by the son's intended wife for behoof of the spouses. In the marriage contract the son accepted the obligations therein contracted by his father as in full satisfaction in any event of all legal claims for legitim or otherwise he might have upon his father's estate. At the date of the marriage contract & of the bond the only claim to legitim possible to the son was in the event of his elder brother predeceasing his father. That event happened, & at the father's death the amount of legitim to which the second son would have had a claim, had he not discharged it, was £25,000:—Held: the bond could not be regarded as a debt incurred by the father for full consideration in money or money's worth wholly for deceased's own use & benefit in the sense of 1894 Act, s. 7 (1), & did not form a proper deduction in determining the value of his estate for the purposes of estate duty.—*LORD ADVOCATE v. sa. "Interest in business"—What is—1914 Act, s. 15.—A father & two of his sons carried on business in partnership. By a re-arrangement of the partnership relations the father accepted £124,646 in full of his whole rights in the old firm & its assets, & agreed to allow this sum to remain as a loan to the new firm at 4 per cent. interest, on condition that, if called up by him, or in any event on his death, it was to be repaid by ten yearly instalments. The father contributed no capital to the new firm apart from the loan, but had an interest in the profits to the extent of a one-tenth share. He died in 1922, leaving a will by which he bequeathed the residue of his estate, including the loan, to his family, & estate duty was duly paid thereon. The two sons came to an arrangement with their father's exors., under which the sons agreed to repay the loan at once in return for a certain discount; & in settling with the exors., they retained in the business the respective shares of the loan falling to them, by crediting themselves with the amounts in the books of the firm.

the transaction was a bond fide sale between mother & son, & no succession duty was payable; (2) as to the claim for estate duty, there had been a "purchase for partial consideration" within 1894 Act, s. 3 (2), the consideration paid represented four-fifths of the value of the property at the date of such purchase, & estate duty was payable only upon one-fifth of the value as at the date of the death of the tenant for life; (3) "partial consideration," in sect. 3 (2), meant something less than the full & fair value as between buyer & seller.—Re BATEMAN (BARONESS), [1925] 2 K. 128a. — "Land & chattels"—What are "chattels."—By an Act of 54 Geo. 3 an annuity of £2,000 was inalienably settled on Lord E. & his successors in title. In 1892 the redemption of the annuity for a sum of £55,890 was agreed upon, & that amount was paid into ct. & invested in the purchase of Consols. The fifth Viscount E. died in Aug. 1922, & the sixth Viscount in Feb. 1923. Questions having arisen as to the payment of estate duty, the ct. was asked whether estate duty became payable (a) upon the capital of the sum of Consols, or (b) upon the value of the interest of the successor to the title in such sum of Consols, & if estate duty became so payable, then whether, for the purpose of determining the rate of estate duty, such sum of Consols ought (a) to be aggregated with the other property, or (b) to be treated as an estate by itself:—Held: "chattels" in collocation with settled lands in 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), did not suggest personality generally, but those particular items of it which were usually settled upon trusts that followed the devolution of the settled land, & the sum of Consols was not "chattels" within the sub-sect., & must be aggregated with the other property for the purpose of paying estate duty.—Re EXMOUTH'S ANNUITY, [1925] Ch. 280; 94 L. By sub-clause 28 he provided that on the death of any of the legatees, his or her share should accrue to the survivors. By sub-clause 29 he provided for the application of the remaining income in payment of other legacies, & these being paid the remainder was to be applied in the same manner as the 74½ hundredths. By clause 10 it was directed that the capital should go in moieties to charities. By an order made on July 28, 1924, the income was divided into one hundred & thirds. Two of the income beneficiaries had now died. On a summons taken out in these circumstances asking whether the estate duty payable by reason of the death of any person entitled to any share of the income was to be paid upon the value of the share in the capital equal to that of the income previously enjoyed by such person or upon the like proportion of the actuarial capital value of the income during the respective lives of the several persons entitled thereto or other the period during which the trusts in respect of such income should be subsisting or how otherwise the same ought to be calculated & out of what fund the same was payable:—Held: (1) the property which passed on the death of any such person must be taken to be a share of capital in the residuary trust fund, & that estate duty must be paid on the value of such share; (2) the duty payable on any such death was a first charge on that portion of the residue out of which the income was payable, & must be borne by the corpus of such estate.—Re

Subject to such rentcharge, the L. settled estates were limited to the use of pltf. for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. By a deed poll dated Oct. 15, 1913, provision was made for the abatement of the £50,000 rentcharge in certain events. The third Viscount, who was tenant for life of the estates in question, had died in 1923, while nine of the sixteen half-yearly instalments of estate duty payable in respect of the death of the second Viscount, who had died in 1919, remained unpaid. One of the questions for the decision of the ct. at the original hearing of the summons (Re Portman (Viscount), No. 249, post) was as to what proportion of the balance remaining unpaid at the death of the third Viscount of the estate duty, which became assessable on the death of the second Viscount in respect of the L. estates, should be borne by the yearly rentcharge of £50,000, & it was admitted in argument that there was no difference in principle in respect of that unpaid balance between that duty & that which was assessable upon the death of the third Viscount. After judgment had been delivered & before the minutes had been finally drawn up, leave was given to withdraw the admission made in argument as aforesaid, & it was directed that the question with regard to the liability of the rentcharge in respect of the unpaid instalments of estate duty assessable on the death of the second Viscount should be argued:—Held: the effect of 1894 Act, s. 14 (1), was to throw the incidence of the duty ratably & in proper proportions upon all persons becoming beneficially interested in the property upon which the duty was constituted a first charge by force of sect. 9 (1) of the Act; the rentcharge, or the abated rentcharge, must be dealt with, as regards these unpaid instalments, in the manner indicated in the original judgment; & the order would be in the terms of the minutes prepared in accordance with that judgment.—Re PORTMAN (VISCOUNT) (No. 2), [1925] Ch. 294; 94 L. Testator then directed that after his wife's death four capital sums amounting to £10,000, free of estate duty & settlement estate duty but not free of legacy duty, should be set apart & the respective income paid to certain life tenants respectively. By clause 9 testator directed that on the cesser of the respective life tenancies the respective capital sums should be paid to thirteen charities thereafter named "in the order of priority in which the names appear in this my will as far as the money will go, no. 1 being first paid; no. 2 next &

The residue, after providing for the settled £10,000 was given to a daughter. Testator died on June 11, 1914, before Finance Act, 1914 (c. 10), s. 14, abolishing settlement estate duty & the relief thereby conferred, was passed. The estate was cleared & the residuary trust fund paid to the Public Trustee, who paid the income to the wife till her death on July 1, 1928, & then set apart the £10,000 settled legacies. One of these was immediately distributable, without further payment of estate duty, owing to the life tenant having predeceased the wife; but on the cesser of subsequent life tenancies estate duty would be payable, & the Public Trustee therefore issued a summons to determine how it was to be borne, as between the successive charities:—Held: clause 9 conferred an absolute priority as between the successive charities, & was sufficient as between the earlier & the later charities to exempt the former from their prout jacie statutory liability to contribute to the estate duty under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 8 (4).—*Re LOMER, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. - 265b. Devise with option to sell to specified person—Purchaser to pay annuities & road charges—No reference to death duties.—Testator, by his will, devised land to P. subject to the payment of certain annuities, of road-making charges for which testator was liable, & of estate & other death duties, & subject also to the proviso that if within twenty-years of testator's death P. should desire to sell the land, he was to give the Governors of the N. Grammar School the option of purchasing the land at the price of £300 an acre, such offer to be subject to the payment by the Governors of the said annuities & road charges, & acceptance to be notified within three months. The land, of about 22 acres in area, was in fact worth £670 an acre at the date of the testator's death. In accordance with the condition P. offered it to the School Governors at £300 an acre, & the offer was duly accepted & the land sold & conveyed to the Governors for £6,688. The value of the land for the purposes of death duties was assessed at £14,720. On a summons being taken out to determine whether the Governors were liable to pay a rateable proportion of the estate & succession duties levied upon the value of the property:—Held: that the Governors having acquired the land, not under any disposition by testator, but by the voluntary act of P. in selling instead of retaining the property, took no benefit under testator's will, & they acquired the land expressly subject to annuities & road-making charges, but impliedly free from any charge for death duties.—*Re COCKERILL, MACKANESS v. Out of corpus—Estate settled by Act of Parliament—Whether duty unpaid.—Where the formal assessment of estate duty on an inalienable estate settled by Act of Parliament is not made until after the passing of Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), although sufficient money has before the passing of the Act been paid over to the Inland Revenue, the duty is still unpaid within sect. 44 of the Act &, at the option of the tenant in tail in possession, may be raised & paid out of the corpus of the settled estate. A person entitled to a rentcharge on such an estate under a private Act of Parliament which gives the owner for the time being of the estate the right to create a rentcharge is not entitled to exercise a similar option. The bonds passed on the death of testator. The register of bondholders was at Ottawa in Ontario.

Held: as the bonds constituted a statutory obligation they were debts by specialty & therefore in point of liability to taxation had their local situation at the testator's place of residence in Alberta & were subject to the duties in question.—*ROYAL TRUST CO. v. Under Succession Duty Act (Que.), 1909, art. 1376, duty was imposed upon "property actually situate within the province, whether the transmission takes place within or without the province."—Held: as the ownership of the shares could be effectively dealt with only in Nova Scotia, they were not property situate in Quebec, & the claim could not be maintained.—*BRASSARD v. Completion did not take place, & pltf. demanded the above balance from deft. & brought an action against him to recover it. The vendor claimed that pltf. was liable to him for £100 damages & directed deft. not to pay over that sum to pltf. Deft. thereupon issued an interpleader summons in respect of the £100, & the master directed an issue, & ordered that deft. should pay into ct. the £100 less his costs. On the trial of the issue the vendor's claim was dismissed. Pltf. then obtained leave to sign judgment for £390, for which deft. admitted liability. Pltf. now claimed the additional £100 in full without any deduction of deft.'s costs. Deft. contended that the master's order allowing deft. to deduct his costs was final:—Held: the master's order allowing the deduction of costs was not res judicata, but merely relieved deft. from paying the full £100 until the decision of the interpleader issue & the result of the action, & pltf. was entitled to recover the full £100.—*ALLNUTT v. With a view to selling the distillery as a going concern the liquidator continued distilling up to Mar. 31, 1921, but not after, & pending the sale of the business he sold the co.'s stocks of whiskey as opportunity offered. Such sales of whiskey extended over a period of more than two years. An assessment to income tax was made upon the co. for the year 1921-22 in respect of the profits of its business on the footing that the liquidator was carrying on the trade in that year. This assessment was discharged by the Special Comrs. on appeal on the ground that an assessment on the co. for the preceding year had been discharged by the recorder on appeal to him from the determination of the Special Comrs., & that they were bound to follow his decision:—Held: the Special Comrs. were not bound by the decision of the recorder regarding the 1920-21 appeal to discharge the 1921-22 assessment.—*EDWARDS v. In a previous action the patent had been attacked only on the ground of prior publication of two specifications, G. & V., & the issue of infringement had not been contested. In that action the patent had been held to be valid. It was contended by deft. that the ct. was bound by the prior decision only as to construction of the specification & not as to subject-matter, that the additional documents relied on showed features claimed in the specification not disclosed by G. or V., & that, owing to the issue of infringement not having been contested it had been unnecessary for the ct. to define the ambit of the claims:—Held: the ct. was not strictly bound by a prior decision as to anticipation, & it was open to deft. to prove anticipation by documents not before the ct. in the previous action.—*HIGGINSON & ARUNDEL v. The trustees objected to an assessment for the financial year 1918–1919 under Land Tax Assessment Act, 1910–1916, of Australia; they claimed under sect. 38 (7) of the Act a deduction of £5,000 in respect of the share of each daughter, & a case was stated for the opinion of the Full Ct. of the High Ct. upon the questions: (1) whether the shares of the joint owners, or of any & which of them, in the land were original shares within sect. 38; (2) how many deductions of £5,000 resp. should make. The Full Ct. answered these questions as follows: (1) the shares of the six children surviving at the date of the assessment: (2) six. Upon the assessment for 1919–1920 the comr. allowed only one deduction of £5,000, contending that the beneficiaries were not joint owners within the Act. Upon a case stated the Full Ct. upheld that view, & held that the comr. was not estopped by the previous decision:—Held: the comr. was estopped, since although in the previous litigation no express decision had been given whether the beneficiaries were joint owners, it being assumed & admitted that they were, the matter so admitted was fundamental to the decision then given.—*HOYSTEAD v. Security was given in London in accordance with the salvage contract, & the ship was refloated & taken to Constantinople for temporary repairs. Before she was ready to leave, the deft. L. brought an action against the master in the Turkish ct. on the ground that the ship was about to be removed without security having been given. By order of the Turkish ct. the ship was arrested, & as the master had no evidence of what had been done in London & L. took an oath that security had not been given, the Turkish ct., awarded L. £23,890. Judgment against separate estate of married woman.—Action to obtain payment into court.]—Where the ct. in giving judgment against a married woman who is a defaulting trustee orders that the judgment be satisfied out of her separate estate & execution proves useless it is not open to pltf. in a new action to obtain against her judgment in a different form for payment of the moneys into ct. As against her the matter is res judicata. But if it appear that she has transferred the moneys to a person with knowledge of the proceedings against her action will lie against the transferee as constructive trustee. Pltf. obtained against the first deft. a married woman judgment for payment out of her separate estate of the sum in dispute & costs. Evidence disclosed that the first deft. had parted with the whole of the sum, having transferred most of it to her sister, the second deft., who was not a party to the proceedings but knew of them at the time. Execution in respect of the judgment thus proving useless pltf. now brought this action alleging that the first deft. had paid the money to the second deft. in order to defeat any judgment for pltf., & that the second deft. received the money as constructive trustee :—Held : in regard to the first deft. the matter was res judicata, as pltf. had already obtained judgment against her separate estate & therefore could not now on the same facts obtain against her another form of judgment for payment of the moneys into ct.—GREEN v. g i. ———— Subsequent conviction for same offence—Whether appeal on action constituted “further proceedings.” Pltf. sued deft. by civil bill for £20 damages for assault. The Recorder held in pltf.'s favour, & gave a decree for £14 5s. Deft. appealed from the decree, & entered into a recognisance as provided by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 29, s. 6. After the case had been at hearing before the judge of Assize for a short time, deft. admitted the assault & the reasonableness of the damages awarded, & raised a new defence which had not been available to him in the county et. Deft. relied upon Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, c. 100, s. 43, & it was contended on his behalf that deft.'s conviction coupled with the payment of the penalty operated as a release from all further or other proceedings, including the re-hearing of the civil bill on appeal:—Held: the appeal did not constitute “further or other proceedings” within Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, s. 45.—

formal conviction in such cases:—Held: the plea was no bar to the action within Offences Against the Person Act, 1861 (c. 100), s. 45, & taking it as it stood it was not proved.—*HARTLEY v. At the hearing of a suit in ejectment the tenant contended that his original lease being for manufacturing purposes he had a tenancy from year to year, & was entitled to six months' notice:—Held: he was not estopped from so contending as the facts affecting the tenancy were within the knowledge of both parties.—*JACKS & Co. v. Resp's. built a house & applt. received a bonus in respect of it. In 1916 applt. sought to eject resp's.:—Held: whether the lease was a permanent one under the agreement, applt.'s statement in the letter that it was so was a representation of fact & not an expression of opinion, & he was estopped from denying it.—

On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to pltf. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place:—Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between pltf. & third parties, who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since (a) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result; & (b) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

(2) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers' Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is incorrect, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as prima facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.—FALCON v. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO., LTD., [1926] 1 K. B. 393; 95 L. J. K. B. 148; 134 L. T. 246; 42 T. L. R. 91; affd., [1926] 2 K. B. 474; 96 L. J. K. B. 88; 135 L. T. 650; 42 T. L. R. 666; 70 Sol. Jo. 756, C. A.

q i. ————]—Reconstructed cash book.—A fire in the office of the secretary-treasurer of the pltf. municipality having destroyed most of the pltf.'s records therein, including the record of payment of taxes made since the last audit, the secretary-treasurer, under the authority of the council, employed an office assistant & canvassers, who compiled from the surviving records & from receipts, cheques & other evidence in the hands of taxpayers a statement called "the reconstructed cash book," showing the amounts paid by them during two months of 1921. In an action against the secretary-treasurer to recover an amount alleged to have been misappropriated by him during 1921, pltf. sought to charge him with the receipt of the sum which was shown by said "reconstructed cash book" as received & said book was submitted in evidence:—Held: said book was not admissible against deft.; its contents were not obtained in the manner contemplated by Rural Municipality Act & therefore, it did not, even if it had been wholly compiled by deft., constitute an acknowledgment by him, as the entries in the original cash book would have done; he had not so recognised or acted upon it as to make its contents evidence against him; it was not secondary evidence of the destroyed cash book; & the necessary foundation not having been laid for the purpose, it was not admissible as secondary evidence of the taxpayers' receipts & cheques.—GLEN BAIN RURAL MUNICIPALITY v. 3165a. ———.]—Marriage of parents.—In an action brought by plffs., who claimed to be two of the next of kin of an intestate, for administration of her estate, the usual order for inquiries as to the next of kin & heir-at-law of the intestate was made. In taking those inquiries before the master it became necessary to prove the lawful marriage of the parents of the intestate before her birth &, as no record of the marriage could be found, a summons was taken out by plffs. for the determination of the question whether three certificates of birth of three of the children, including the intestate, of those parents & a certificate of death of one of those children were prima facie or any evidence of the lawful marriage of the parents :—Held : the certificates were admissible, but not alone sufficient, because taken by themselves they did not identify the persons therein mentioned. It would be for the master at the inquiry to determine whether the certificates, taken in conjunction with the other evidence adduced before him, were sufficient to establish the fact of marriage between the parents in question. Re Windle, No. 3158, overd.—

The question is whether the papers are independent or interdependent.
- Testator left two wills, one English, the other American; the latter dealt exclusively with property outside the English jurisdiction, but the two documents were interdependent with regard to the residue, which was liable for English estate duty. The exors. of the two wills were different persons. Testator had expressly directed that the American will should be “probated” in America:—Held: (1) the two wills & a codicil to the English will should all be proved in England; (2) the document to be retained in the English Probate Registry as evidence of the testamentary act of making the American will should be an examined & sealed copy of that will, & after probate the original American will should be handed out to the exors. named therein for probate in America.—In the Estate of TODD, [1926] P. 173; 95 L. pound a will & codicil, even if, though the will is pronounced for, the codicil is pronounced against. The position of such exors. differs from that of persons named as exors. in a testamentary paper which they unsuccessfully propound. Having established the validity of the will, & made good their position as testator's exors., they are entitled to their costs of the litigation out of the estate as between solr. & client, & can be deprived of that right, which rests substantially upon contract, only if they have acted culpably or unreasonably. Until that has been established, their costs are not in the discretion of the ct., & notwithstanding Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 49, repealed & re-enacted by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 31 (1) (h), an appeal lies without leave from an order condemning them in costs or depriving them of costs out of the estate.—*In the Estate of PLANT, WILD v. 3127b. —.]—The principle of the decision in In the Estate of Plant, Wild v. Plant, No. 3127a, ante, that exors. who have established the validity of their will are entitled to their whole costs of the litigation, although they fail in establishing a codicil, does not extend in all cases to costs incurred by them by reason of their insisting upon probate not only of clauses in a will expressing the testamentary mind of their testator, but also of a clause which is found not to be his testamentary act. If a residuary gift is excluded from probate on the ground of want of capacity the question still arises whether the costs so incurred by the exors. are due to their "violation or culpable neglect of duty." If the ct. finds on this issue that an exor. is a wrongdoer, his prima facie right to receive out of the estate costs not otherwise provided for is displaced.—*THOMAS v. C. who was the right heir of H., by his will appointed the applicant T. exor. & trustee & devised his lands to the use of the applicant for life with remainders over. On Jan. 1, 1926, the commencement of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), the lands passing under the wills of H. & C. remained subject to the settlement created by the will of H., & in the event of the termination of the limited ownership under the will, also subject to the settlement created by the will of C. On the same date J. was tenant for life under the will of H. By a vesting deed dated Apr. 16, 1926, the lands were declared to be vested in J. in fee upon the trusts operating from time to time under the will of H. or otherwise. J. died Apr. 27, 1928. General probate of his will including the settled land was granted to his exors. in the first place. Later the grant was amended limiting it "save & except the settled land vested in testator settled previously to his death & remaining settled notwithstanding his death." J. having died without issue appct. T. then became tenant for life in possession under the settlement created by the will of C. as well as the trustee of that settlement. From that date the trustees accumulated funds until 1924, when they brought an action of multipointing & exoneration for distribution of the estate:—Held: (1) while as a general rule interest was allowed upon legacies from the death of testator or from the prescribed date of payment, there was no absolute rule compelling the ct. in all cases to allow such interest, the general rule being displaced if circumstances showed it to be inapplicable; (2) the general legacies were not entitled to interest on their legacies from 1890 to 1919, in respect that, owing to the insolvency of the estate during that period, there was no asset realisable to meet the legacies nor any interest-bearing subject; (3) there was no absolute rule to the effect that the rate of legal interest should be 5 per cent., the rate of interest being in every case for the discretion of the ct. in the particular circumstances.—*WADDILL'S TRUSTEES v. If payment was delayed in order thereby to benefit a residuary legatee, then, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, no interest upon such postponed legacies would be payable before the expiration of the prescribed period. But where the postponement was intended primarily to enable the exors. to collect & realise the assets, the postponed legacies would carry interest from such a time after the end of the "exors." year as the exors. had in hand realised assets which

Testatrix declared that should her residuary personal estate be insufficient to pay all the legacies then the legacy of £600 should be reduced to £500; & every legacy & annuity was bequeathed free of legacy duty. There was a deficiency in the estate:—Held: (1) there were sufficient indications in the will that the testatrix intended the distribution of her estate to be in accordance with the priorities mentioned, & the settled legacies must be paid in full before all the other pecuniary legacies; (2) the legacy of £600 must be reduced to £500 & this reduced legacy, plus the duty, must abate pro rata with the other postponed legacies, including those to the exors.; (3) the costs of packing & delivering specific legacies must be borne by the specific legatees.—*Re LEACH, MILNE v. Probate was granted to the adult exors. reserving to the infant a right to be admitted to exorship upon attaining majority:—Held: the change made in the law of the Imperial Act of 1830, known as Sugden's Act, adopted in this Province, & now found in Trustee Act, R. S. O. 1927, c. 150, s. 53, does not apply to cases in which testator himself has given the property to his exors., the Act applies only to cases where there is a bare appointment of exors., so that the implication of law has to be resorted to in order to see whether the estate of testator not otherwise disposed of vests in them beneficially virtute officii; & as nothing in the will indicated a contrary intention, the exors. took beneficially.—Re GRACEY (1928), 63 O. property, less annual charges but without deduction for repayment of mtges. Applt. contended that the estate was still in course of administration, that the residue had not been ascertained, that there had been no appropriation to the beneficiaries, & that no part of the income of the estate was his income for super-tax purposes. The Crown contended that applt. at any time after 1916 could have compelled the exors. to convey to him his share of the residuary estate subject to charges, that the residue was both ascertainable & ascertained, & that the income from applt.'s share of the residue was his income for super-tax purposes. The assessments were confirmed by the Special Comrs. on appeal:—Held: so long as the mtge. or other debts remained unpaid the exors. were entitled to retain any assets coming to their hands, the applt. did not enforce conveyance to himself of his share of the residue, & therefore the income arising from his share was not his income for super-tax purposes.—*Daw v. 5594a. Direction in will for payment of "money secured on mortgage" out of residue—Balance of unpaid purchase-money.]—Testator, who at the date of his will in 1912 was the owner of several freehold properties, one of which was subject to a mtge. & of leasehold & other personal estate, gave & bequeathed all the freehold & leasehold properties of which he might die possessed upon trusts in favour of certain of his grandchildren & great-grandchildren, & the residue of his estate upon trust for sale & conversion ; he then directed that his trustees should out of the money thereby produced pay (inter alia) his debts & legacies, & should out of the residue of such money pay & discharge "any sum of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold properties," & should stand possessed of the residue of such money in trust to divide same as therein mentioned. After the date of his will testator paid off the mtge. & took a reconveyance of the mortgaged property. Shortly before his death, in June & Oct. 1917, testator contracted to purchase certain freehold properties in respect of which he paid deposits, leaving balances of the purchase-money owing to the respective vendors. On Dec. 23, 1917, testator made a final codicil, by which, after revoking the appointment of one of his exors. & bequeathing a legacy, he confirmed his will in all other respects. Testator died on Dec. 26, 1917, without having completed the purchases or paid the balances of the purchase-money, & shortly after his death his exors. completed the purchases & paid the balances of the purchase-money ; whereupon the question arose whether, as between the persons claiming under testator's will, those balances ought to be borne by the freehold properties of testator in respect of which same were payable, or ought to be satisfied out of his residuary estate :—Held : (1) inasmuch as a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money differs essentially from a mtge., even in the modern & wider sense of that term, upon the true construction of the will in the absence of any context enlarging the meaning of the term "mtge.," the balances of the unpaid purchase-money owing at testator's death were not "sums of money secured on mtge.," & no contrary intention was signified by the direction in the will to pay & discharge such sums out of testator's residuary estate, so as to exclude the operation of 1854 Act, which by virtue of 1867 Act, s. 2, extends to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money ; with the result that the balances in question ought to be borne by & satisfied out of the freehold properties in respect of which same were payable, & the devisees thereof were not entitled to have those balances discharged out of testator's residuary estate ; (2) the confirmation of the will by the last codicil thereto, although executed after the mtge. on testator's freehold property had been paid off & after the vendor's lien had arisen, had not the effect of extending the meaning of the words "any sums of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold & leasehold properties," so as to include the balances of unpaid purchase-money in question.—*Re BEIRNSTEIN, BARNETT v. power to his trustees, if they thought it expedient or necessary either before or after his residuary personal estate should be exhausted to raise money for those purposes by sale or mortgage & subject thereto upon trust for B., in fee. The personal estate of testator was insufficient for the payment of his debts & legacies, & B. supplied such deficiency, including the annual payments to A. in respect of her legacy. A. survived both testator & B. On the death of B., the question arose whether, as testator's personalty was insufficient for the payments before mentioned, testator intended that the corpus of the legacy should be raised out of the real estate devised to B. for the benefit of B., who was testator's residuary legatee :—Held : the words "revert to & be added to my general residuary estate" in the will, showed that the testator meant the legacy to be restored to the funds from which it was taken ; & it was not to be taken from the real estate merely for the purpose of augmenting the personal estate.—*Re SOMERSET (DUKE), THYNNE v. 6267a. ——— Re READE-REVELL, CRELLIN v. MELLING, [1929] W. N. 218.

6281a. ——— Testator, who died on May 17, 1916, by his will appointed appcts. exors. & trustees, & bequeathed a number of absolute & settled pecuniary legacies. Testator gave all his estate whatsoever unto appcts. upon trust for sale & conversion at such time & manner as they should think fit, with power & discretion to postpone sale & conversion & charged the moneys to arise with the legacies bequeathed by his will. Testator's will contained a residuary bequest, investment clause in wide terms, & a power to appcts. to appropriate any part of the estate in its actual condition in satisfaction of any legacy. The principal asset of testator's estate was a sum of nearly a quarter of a million pounds Irish Three per cent. Guaranteed Stock, & the estate was insufficient for payment in full of all the legacies. The Irish stock could not be sold even at a reduced market value of £151,411 & in the interests of the estate it was inexpedient to realise it at once. Appcts. having caused to be prepared a scheme of apportionment, appropriation & abatement among & between the legacies, applied by an originating summons issued on June 27, 1917, to the ct. for its sanction:—Held: appcts. could exercise the discretionary power of appropriation notwithstanding the fact that some of the legacies were settled by testator's will.—*Re DANIELS, LONDON CITY & MIDLAND EXECUTOR TRUSTEE CO., LTD. v. for an unexpired term, to a tenant who had become insolvent & unable to pay rent; that the premises were of less value than the rent, viz. of the value of a certain sum, part of which deft. had paid to pltf., & part towards the expense of a party-wall; that, before the rent became due, deft. offered to surrender all his interest in the premises to pltf., who refused to accept them; & that he had fully administered, etc. Replication; that the premises were of more value than the sum mentioned in the plea, viz. of the value of the rent; & that deft. did not offer to surrender, etc. Issue thereon:—Held: (1) the real value of the premises, as against deft., must be taken to be that which it would have been if he had not himself co of a covenant to repair in the original lease; (2) the value, as between pltf. & deft., was not affected by the insolvency of the under-tenant, whose lease also contained a covenant to repair with a proviso of re-entry for breach & for non-payment of rent.—HORNIDGE v. The workmen removed nine guards for the purpose of setting the rollers, & having replaced only eight of the guards, started the rollers. Owing to their neglect, one workman, who slipped & fell, was dragged into the coupling gear & was killed. An information against resps. under 1901 Act, s. 130, for neglecting to observe the provision of sect. 10 (1) (c) that the mill-gearing must be securely fenced, was dismissed, on the grounds that resps. had taken all adequate precautions by providing the necessary guards, & that it was the fault of the workmen that caused the accident:—Held: under sect. 10 it was the duty of resps. not merely to provide guards, but to fence the machinery securely, & as they had not performed this duty, the justices ought to have convicted them.—*THOMAS v. A workman in their employment, following his daily duties, climbed up a ladder to the shafting in the dye-house to fix a bolt on a pulley, & was caught in the shafting, whirled round & killed. No one actually saw the occurrence, but, as portions of deceased’s clothing were on the shaft, they probably got caught in it. An information against defts. charged that, contrary to Factory & Workshop Act, 1901, s. 10 (1) (c), a part of the mill gearing, namely, a line of shafting, was neither securely fenced nor in such a position nor of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as if it had been securely fenced. The justices dismissed the information, but stated a case for the opinion of the K. B. D.:—Held: defts., in failing to fence the line of shafting, had contravened Factory & Workshop Act, 1901, s. 10 (1) (c), & fenced—Overhead shaft.—Resps. were the occupiers of a factory in which was a machine driven by a pulley fixed on a horizontal shaft, which formed part of the mill gearing. The driving belt slipped off the pulley & an employee of resps. attempted to put it back while the shaft was running & sustained injuries. The shaft & pulley were about thirteen feet from the floor & they were not fenced or guarded. In attempting to put on the belt the workman stood on a beam about seven feet from the floor, & was acting contrary to resps.’ instructions. Resps. were summoned for not having the shaft fenced, but the justices, being of opinion that any fence would have been useless owing to the shaft being thirteen feet above the ground, dismissed the case:—Held: the finding of the justices was not equivalent to a finding that the shaft was “in such position or of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as it would be if it were securely fenced,” which was the requirement of 1901 Act, s. 10 (1) (c), & there would have been no evidence to support the latter finding.—*ATKINSON v. 81 iii. ———.]—In an action by the widow of a deceased employee against his employer pltf. alleged that deft. in contravention of Factories & Shops Act, 1912 (N.S.W.), neglected & omitted securely or at all to fence the dangerous parts of a machine whereby deceased was injured & died. The jury returned a general verdict for deft.:—Held: in the particular circumstances there should be a new trial, there having been a misdirection on the question of contributory negligence upon which the jury might have acted.—*CORFIELD v. - X. owned a building which was a factory where more than forty persons were employed, & carried on business as a shirt manufacturer in the basement & on the ground & first floors. The second floor was unoccupied. The third & fourth floors were let to Y., who carried on business there as a blouse manufacturer, employing more than forty persons. The factory of X. & that of Y. were respectively worked by separate & distinct electric motors, driven by electricity generated & supplied by the electricity undertaking of a municipal corp. & each factory had a separate meter. Without this supply of electricity the electric motors could not be driven:—Held: mechanical power, namely, electrical current, was supplied to different parts of the same building within sect. 149 (1). Accordingly, as the building was a tenement factory, etc., the owner, was responsible under sect. 14 (6), (7) of the Act that the means of escape in case of fire provided throughout the factory, including the two floors occupied by Y., should be maintained in good condition & free from obstruction.—*MUMBY v. - 153a. — “Temporarily used”—Machinery not in actual use.—By Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 79, the Secretary of State may make regulations in respect of dangerous machinery. By sect. 105 the provisions of the Acts with respect (inter alia) to fines in respect of death or injury are applicable as if any premises on which machinery worked by steam, water, or other mechanical power is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building or any structural work in connection with a building were included in the word “factory,” & as if the person who by himself, his agents or workmen, temporarily uses any such machinery for the before-mentioned purpose were the occupier of a factory. The Secretary of State, in pursuance of s. 79, made certain regulations casting upon employers of workmen the duty of fencing floor-openings with a suitable guard rail & toe board or other efficient means: Held: (1) the words “temporarily used” are not confined to the actual moment when the machinery is in use, but extend to the whole period during which the machinery is available for use in the constructional work, & therefore that persons who had brought such machinery upon the premises were liable to conviction as the occupiers of a factory in respect of the death of a workman who fell through an unfenced shaft at a time when the mechanical hoist for which the shaft was made was not in use; (2) the words “employers of workmen” imposed upon sub-contractors, engaged in laying floors in a building in course of erection, liability in respect of the death of one of their workmen who fell through an unguarded well hole which the sub-contractors had left for a staircase in the construction of which the sub-contractors were not concerned.—*BARNETT v. No notices containing the terms of the agreement were kept by resps. as required by Truck Act, 1896 (c. 44), & no particulars in writing were supplied to applt. as required by that Act:—Held: the agreement was a clear attempt to evade the above Act. 32 ii. —.—.]—In the usual type of family arrangement, unless any item of property which is admitted by all the parties to belong to one of them is allotted to another there is no "exchange" or other transfer of ownership.

A binding family arrangement of this type can be made orally, & if made orally, no question of registration arises. If such arrangement is followed by a writing containing reference to it, then the question is whether thereby the terms of the arrangement have been "reduced to the form of a document," i.e. formally recorded in a document with the purpose that they should be evidenced by that document, & that is a question of fact in each case to be determined upon a consideration of the nature & phraseology of the writing & the circumstances in which & the purpose with which it is written. —RAM GOPAL v. TULSHI RAM (1928), 1. L. R. 51 All. 79.—IND.

Pltfs., the county council, owned land adjoining one of the approaches & built a school on it. Defts. denied pltfs.' right to free access to the school over the approach :—Held : as the old highway consisted of the approaches to the ferry plus the passage across the river, & the substituted highway consisted of the approaches to the bridge plus the bridge, & as the old approaches were highways to which owners would be entitled to access, the substituted approaches were highways by which adjoining owners had similar rights of access, & defts.' claim was ill founded.—*YORKSHIRE, EAST RIDING, COUNTY COUNCIL v. By sect. 56 of the Act they were empowered to establish, maintain, work & use a ferry service for passengers, animals vehicles & goods between the Sandbanks & South Haven Point within Poole Harbour. By sect. 62, passed for the protection of the Poole Harbour Comrs., pltfs. were required to establish or acquire & thereafter continuously work the ferry by means of a vessel propelled by steam on a chain cable system, & by sects. 62, 97, passed for the benefit of certain land-owners, they were required to provide from seven o'clock in the forenoon when summer time should be in force & from eight o'clock in the forenoon at all other times of the year until one hour after sunset on every day a minimum hourly service of vessels from each shore. The two sects. contained provisions enabling Poole Harbour Comrs. & the land-owners respectively to exercise certain powers & rights in case pltfs. should cease working the ferry or fail to work it continuously & efficiently. They established a ferry service in accordance with these provisions :—Held : the Act did not confer on pltfs. an exclusive right of ferry, & that they were not entitled to an injunction restraining defts., who for many years before the Act had in fact carried passengers between the Sandbanks & South Haven Point without claiming any franchise entitling them to do so, from carrying passengers bicycles & goods across the mouth of Poole Harbour within or near the limits of pltfs.' said ferry.—*BOURNEMOUTH-SWANAGE MOTOR ROAD & FERRY CO. v. 204 ii. — Partition by father on remarriage—Allegation by settlor that conveyance in fraud of creditors—Onus of proof.]—In 1904 a Burman executed on his remarriage a deed of partition by which he purported to convey to his daughter, the only child of his first marriage & then eight years of age, immovable property as her one-quarter share of the joint property of that marriage, & he appointed his own mother to take care of it. He remained in possession, but contributed to the support of his daughter, who resided with her maternal grandmother. At the time of the conveyance the father was considerably indebted, & his creditors, finding that they could not attach the property, settled with him upon easy terms. In 1915 the father promised his daughter & her maternal uncle that the property would be restored to her. In 1925 the daughter sued for possession. The father pleaded that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & that the suit was barred by limitation:—Held: upon the whole facts the father had failed to discharge the burden, which was heavily upon him of proving that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & not a genuine conveyance of his daughter's share, possibly liberally calculated; & consequently his possession was not adverse to his daughter, but on her behalf.—*MA NGWE NAING v. little or no business ability, who was possessed of a life interest in a capital sum of considerable amount, had been adjudicated bkpt., & under threat of his creditors to realise the life interest, had approached deft., a money-lender, for assistance. Notwithstanding the business ignorance of pltf. & the financial straits in which he was placed, of which deft., by reason of previous transactions with him, must have been well aware, & without pltf., being independently advised, a sale of the life interest to deft. was arranged at a figure considerably under its real value. In an action brought some eleven years later to have the transaction set aside:—Held: although inadequacy of consideration for a transaction is not of itself sufficient to give rise to a presumption of undue influence, the surrounding circumstances in the present case were sufficient to show that pltf. was in the hands of deft. & the subsequent delay in bringing action, & the conduct by pltf., in effecting further insurance in pursuance of the transaction having taken place, while pltf. yet remained in ignorance of its impeachable nature, did not amount to a confirmation & same should be set aside.—*HARRIS v. On a charge of having committed an offence within

Industrial Assurance Act, 1923 (c. 8), s. 39 (2) :—Held : (1) the words in sect. 4 (1) "relating to payments on the death of children" were merely descriptive of the group of sects. in the 1896 Act headed "Payments on death of children," & did not limit those sects. in their application to industrial assurance cos. to payment only, but included the provisions as to insurance; (2) the above provision in each policy had no legal effect at all, & it could not be contended that in fact the co. did not insure for more than the statutory amount; (3) the proceedings were in time because, for this purpose, the insurance co. did not insure from the time only when the policies were taken out, but (LORD HEWART, C.J.) either insured on every occasion when a premium was paid, or (AVORY, J.) continued to insure during the time that the assured was not in default & the policies were in force.—*HARKER v. The certificate having been refused, the branch brought a petition, under Ct. of Session (Scotland) Act, 1868 (c. 100), s. 91, for an order on the society to grant a certificate:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the petition, & procedure by way of a summary petition under sect. 91 was a convenient & practical method of invoking the aid of the ct.—SONS OF TEMPERANCE FRIENDLY SOCIETY, [1926] S. 252 i. ————.]—Prizes provided out of admission money.—A person hired a hall for one night, & another hall for two nights, & advertised that whist drives, open to the public on payment of one shilling for admission, would be held in the halls on those nights. A large number of people attended, & prizes were awarded to the successful players. The purchase of the prizes was defrayed out of the admission money, any balance over being retained by the promoter:—Held: (1) the playing of progressive whist was gaming, in view of the facts that the element of chance predominated in the game, & that the prizes were derived from the admission money, & it was immaterial whether the proceedings were or were not detrimental to the morals of the community; (2) accused had managed, conducted, or carried on gaming in the premises, although his operations had been restricted to three isolated occasions.—HUNTON v. 276 i. Whether dominant element of skill.—Deft. kept for use by the public on his premises a number of machines, known by the name of "Diddler." Any one wishing to use one of these machines purchased from deft. discs at the price of seven for 6d. He inserted one disc in a slot & pulled a handle, which caused three rollers to revolve. On each roller was printed a number of devices, such as cherries, roses, etc. If certain combinations of these devices stopped opposite a pointer on the face of the machine, the player won a certain number of discs. With these he could purchase on the premises certain goods. The winning combinations & the odds for each were printed on the front of the machine in view of the player. If none of these combinations stopped opposite the pointer, the player lost his disc. The machine was fitted with a control, by which the player could stop the rollers, one at a time, & so endeavour to obtain a winning combination. There were 15 machines on the premises. Deft. was prosecuted under Gaming Houses Act, 1854, s. 4, that he, being the occupier of the premises, did use them for the purpose of unlawful gaming. The justice was satisfied on the evidence that the majority of the persons who used the machine would be players of less than average skill, & therefore, held that the game was one in which the chances were not favourable alike to all players, including the owner of the machine, & accordingly convicted the deft.:—Held: the conviction was right.—GORDON v. 464a. ———.]—A printer printed & sold to a purchaser a set of tickets adapted for use in a lottery, but no lottery was then in existence. The purpose was that the purchaser should institute & carry on a lottery by means of the tickets, by reselling them singly & providing out of the proceeds a prize for the holder of the winning ticket. The printer took no further interest, financial or otherwise, in the matter, beyond the original purchase price for the sale of the tickets as a set:—Held: the printer was properly convicted of publishing a proposal or scheme for the sale of tickets or chances in a lottery contrary to the above sect.—RANSON v. BURGESS (1927), 137 L. T. 530; 91 J. P. 133; 43 T. L. R. 561; 25 L. G. R. 378; 28 Cox, C. C. 425, D. C.

464b. ——— Distribution of circulars advertising lottery.—Resp. employed canvassers to call from house to house, inviting persons to undertake to buy tea from her regularly. Each week the canvassers carried with them handbills which declared that: "To advertise our famous tea we will distribute among our customers cash gifts of £3 & £6," as the purchaser bought one or two packets of tea per week. The circular continued: "Each customer's name is entered in rotation in our ledger & cash gifts are paid out accordingly." The names & addresses of new customers were entered in the ledger in the exact order in which they had been obtained, the list of one canvasser's customers on his return to the office being completely entered before that of the next was begun. Resp. awarded her bonus each week to the next customer whose name was on the list after that of the customer last to receive a bonus, provided that the customer was still regularly buying the tea. The names of customers who ceased to buy the tea weekly were struck out of the list, thus advancing the names of customers below them. It was stated in one of the circulars that during the twenty-four weeks ending in June, 1928, resp. had paid out £1,920 by way of bonus gifts. Applt., a superintendent of police, preferred an information against resp., charging her with publishing a proposal or scheme for the sale of chances in a lottery not authorised by Act of Parliament, contrary to above Act. The stipendiary magistrate dismissed the information holding that resp. had not published a proposal or scheme for the sale of chances in a lottery:—Held: there were no materials to justify the magistrate in so holding. The case must be remitted to him with the direction to convict.—HOWGATE v. RALPH (1929), 141 L. T. 512; 93 J. P. 127; 45 T. L. R. 426; 73 Sol. Jo. 253; 27 L. G. R. 432, D. C.

n i. ——— Bonds in series—Payment not dependent on knowledge or skill.—In a prosecution for a contravention of Lotteries Act, 1823, it was established that the promoters had formed & put into execution a scheme for the sale of bonds, each of which entitled the holder on certain conditions to £150. To qualify for this sum a participant had first to obtain a bond at the cost of 1s. either from the promoters or from a friend. This was the parent of a family of bonds which was brought into existence by a process of sub-sales. The holder of the parent bond had to buy from the promoters four bonds for 3s. & to sell them to four friends for 1s. each. These four bonds were the first generation, & each of the four holders of them had to repeat the same process, thus bringing the second generation of sixteen bonds into existence. The process had to be repeated until the sixth generation of 4096 bonds had come into existence, making, for the complete series, 5461 bonds. On the occurrence of this event the holder of the parent bond became entitled to £150. Not only was each individual bond a member of a family of bonds, but it could itself become the parent of a new family, & the holder of it was entitled to £150 as soon as its sixth generation was completed:—Held: the scheme was a lottery, in respect that the occurrence of the event upon which payment fell to be made could neither be approximately predicted nor materially influenced by the exercise of any knowledge, experience, art, or skill on the part of the holder of the parent bond.—BARNES v. STRATHERN, [1929] S. C. (J.) 41. —SCOT.

p i. ——— Not dependent on skill alone.—The chance, which the prohibition in Criminal Code, s. 236, has in contemplation is the chance or risk which the competitor is taking. A number of money & other prizes were offered to those whose lists most nearly agreed with that shown by the voting as a whole. No entrance fee was charged, but each entrance form had to be accompanied by part of a bag or wrapper from one of the named articles:— Held: since the competitors were not asked to judge the real merits of the articles but to guess how other people would guess at their popularity, there was material on which a magistrate was justified in finding that the result depended entirely on chance & in convicting the advertising manager of the promoters of an offence under Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41. —*Hobbs v. He was charged before a magistrate with an offence under above sect., & the magistrate held, as a matter of law, on the evidence before him, that the pursuit of a mechanical hare by dogs was "coursing" within above sect., & dismissed the information:—Held: the pursuit of a mechanical hare by dogs was not "coursing" within above sect., & the determination of the magistrate was erroneous in point of law.—*KELSO v. d i. ——— Receipt of money with coupons—Whether offence under Street Betting Act.—[In a complaint under Street Betting Act, 1906, it was proved that accused received in the street from various persons a large number of slips accompanied by sums of money. The slips were odd pieces of paper, upon each of which were written the names of at least one group of eight football teams, to which was added a name, number or other symbol, for identifying the sender of the slip. Accused did not submit lists of football teams for the purpose of selection, the names of such teams being selected by the senders of the slips from lists of teams advertised or reported in the public press to play on the Saturday following the date on which the slips were received by accused. The teams selected were those which the senders of the slips predicted would be winning teams on that Saturday. Along with each slip was sent 1s., the understanding being that, after the results of the matches were published, accused would examine the forecasts made, & thereafter would deduct from the money received a sum in name of commission, & hand over the balance to the person sending in the correct forecast if only one forecast was correct, or, if more than one forecast was correct, an equal share of such balance to each of the senders of correct forecasts. If no correct selection was sent in, there was no distribution, & the whole contributions were carried forward to the next week; which procedure was repeated until a correct forecast was made, or until the end of the football season arrived, when if there had been no correct selection received, the money in hand, less a commission to the accused, was distributed among those who had sent it.—Held: accused was engaged in betting transactions & was guilty of an offence under Street Betting Act, 1906.—*YETTS v. 51a. Duration of agreement to supply—Power to terminate.]—In 1906 a co. was incorporated by statute to supply gas in a certain area in the place of a limited co., & by sect. 7 the statutory co. took the benefit of all contracts & engagements of the limited co. which had been supplying gas to the defts., an urban council, for public lighting. In 1909 the co. entered into an agreement under seal with the council in which it was recited that before the passing of the Act “it was agreed by & between the predecessors of the gas co. & the council that the agreement then in force for public lighting should continue to remain in force & be binding on both parties until the council should determine the same,” & that “it has been deemed desirable by the said parties hereto that the terms of the said agreement for the public lighting shall be set out as hereinafter mentioned.” By the operative part of the agreement the co. agreed to light all the public lamps within the district “from & after the first day in Sept. in every year up to the following first day of May inclusive” on certain terms ; & provisions were made for increasing the number of lamps. There was no provision as to the period for which the agreement was to run or giving either party a right to determine it. By a supplemental agreement dated June 30, 1921, the times of lighting & the charges were varied, & clause 1 (c) provided that new lanterns supplied by the co. should become the property of the council without payment after fifteen years if the agreements continued for so long, “& if the said agreements be determined before the expiration of such period” the council were to pay for them. On Apr. 30, 1927, the council gave notice to determine the agreement on Aug. 31, 1927 :—Held : having regard to the recitals in the original agreement & clause 1 (c) of the supplementary agreement & to the nature of the contracts they were determinable by notice.—*CREDITON GAS CO. v. In an action by which the corpn. sought to recover from the co. the cost of such reinstatement, the co. by counterclaim sought to recover from the corpn. the

 —Pltfs. were the assignees of the rights of the R. Co. under a hire-purchase agreement dated July 6, 1927, whereby the co., "the owners," agreed to let to one T., "the principal," a motor car on the terms that he should be at liberty to purchase the car at a fixed price, paying as a first payment £22 6s. 8d., & thereafter monthly payments of £14 3s. 4d., until the whole was paid. The payments by the principal under this agreement were guaranteed by deft. as surety under a document signed by her on July 6, 1927. The principal afterwards fell in arrears in payment of the monthly instalments, & on Feb. 3, 1928, he wrote to the owners offering a cheque for £20 drawn by a friend in part payment. On Feb. 4 the owners wrote accepting this cheque & stipulating that the rest of the arrears should be paid within one month. The cheque was sent to the owners, but the arrears, which amounted to £79, were not paid within one month, & the owners then took back the car, acting upon their powers under the hire-purchase agreement. On Sept. 18, 1928, the owners assigned their rights under that agreement to pltfs., who claimed £122 in all from deft. as surety:—Held: (1) there was a binding contract by the owners to give time to the principal debtor; (2) the liability for payments under the hire-purchase agreement was one & indivisible, & deft. was entirely discharged from her suretyship.—MIDLAND MOTOR SHOWROOMS v. NEWMAN, [1929] 2 K. B. 256; 98 L. J. K. B. 490; 141 L. T. 230; 45 T. L. R. 499, C. A.

G. applied to be declared insolvent & in due course G. was discharged. D. then sued K. & got a decree against him. Thereafter K. sued G. for recovery of the amount which he had been compelled to pay:—Held: the order of discharge was a bar to the suit.—GANGADHAR v. KANHAI (1928), 1 L. L. sa. On debtor's property—Agreed to be deposited in bank to meet surety's promissory notes—Property garnished by creditor.—A surety having been called upon to pay the principal's debt, paid the creditor part of it in cash & gave him his promissory notes for the balance. The principal, who was selling his house, repaid the surety out of the proceeds the cash previously paid by him & promised to deposit the balance of the proceeds in a bank to the joint credit of the surety & himself. Instead of doing so, he deposited it in his own name & it was garnished by pltf. when the notes given by the surety were not yet due & were still unpaid. On an interpleader issue between the garnisher & the surety who contended that there had been an equitable assignment of the money so deposited:—Held: said promise was nothing more than a voluntary one, never carried to completion, & therefore, unenforceable as against the claims of the principal's other creditors.—

1223a. Charge by several persons of properties—Release of deeds deposited by one.—By a joint & several memorandum of charge twelve persons, including six resps., deposited deeds with applt. as security to relieve applt. from the entire burden of a guarantee given by him to a bank for the overdraft of S. & Co., & they thereby respectively charged the hereditaments to which the deeds related with repayment of all money to become due from S. & Co. Applt., at the request of C., one of the twelve persons, allowed her to take the deeds deposited by her away for the purpose of raising a loan. S. & Co. having gone into liquidation, the bank called upon applt. to make good his guarantee. Thereupon resps. brought an action claiming that they were entitled to have all the deeds deposited by them under the terms of the charge discharged from the debt to which they were made liable to contribute under the charge, on the ground that, by applt. allowing C. to withdraw the deeds deposited by her, their risk had been increased :—Held : (1) there had been an alteration made in the position of those whose properties remained deposited as securities under the charge by reason of applt. allowing the withdrawal by C. of the deeds deposited by her, & they not having consented to the alteration, their properties, the deeds of which they had deposited, were discharged from all claims under the charge ; their right of marshalling had been affected by the withdrawal of the deeds of one of the parties, & the materiality of the alteration was a question to be decided by them ; (2) the same reasoning was applicable, whether what was contributed were securities or personal liability.—SMITH v. Wood [1929], 1 Ch. 14 ; 98 L. J. Ch. 59 ; 139 L. T. 250 ; 72 Sol. Jo. 517, C. A.

1224a. Guarantee of call on shares—Forfeiture of shares—Discharge of surety.—The forfeiture by a co. of the shares of a principal debtor constitutes an interference with the rights of a surety who has guaranteed payment of instalments owing upon such shares, in that it substitutes a fresh & more onerous liability upon the surety than the liability under the original contract, & deprives him of his equitable right of lien upon the shares. A surety is, therefore, discharged by such forfeiture from his contract of suretyship.—*Re DARWEN & PEARCE, [1927] 1 Ch. 176 ; 95 L. J. Ch. 487 ; 136 L. T. 124 ; 70 Sol. Jo. 965 ; [1926] B. & C. st. General rule.—If it is an express or implied condition of, or collateral to, the arrangement for a guarantee, that an existing security, whether inchoate or complete, should be made or kept effective by the creditor for the benefit of the parties as a counter-security, failure to observe that condition discharges the surety absolutely, inasmuch as he has not got the contract he bargained for.

If there is, in fact, in the possession of the creditor such a counter-security, it is the duty of the creditor, whether its existence is known to the surety or not, to exercise reasonable care in maintaining it for the benefit of the surety, so as to be available, unimpaired by reason of any negligence, on the discharge of the debt. If he fails in this duty, the surety is entitled to credit against his liability for the damages suffered by such breach of duty by the creditor.—*NORTHERN BANKING CO., LTD. v. 298a. ——— Paths joining existing highways.]—Evidence of long public user, as of right, of a pathway or roadway for the purpose of passing from one public place to another, is not the less ground for inferring dedication because recreation may have been the sole motive of such user.

H. & W. were neighbouring freeholders, & the sites of their properties originally formed part of the D. estate. The property of H. was originally let on a long lease in 1878 to one G., together with a right of way over a rough road, of the nature of a timber road, leading up from the London Road towards the property & past the property to Box Hill. In 1916 H. acquired the freehold of the property, & took a conveyance of the roadway in 1924. W., without the consent of H., opened a small gate for pedestrians in the boundary fence. In the action H. claimed a declaration that he was the freeholder of the said roadway & an injunction to restrain W. from trespassing thereon. Evidence was given of public user between Box Hill & the London Road for purposes of pleasure:—Held: the evidence of public user led to a presumption that the land had been dedicated, & that the motive of such user was irrelevant.—HUE v. WHITELEY, [1929] 1 Ch. 440; 98 L. J. Ch. 227; 140 L. T. 531.

311a. Footpath along sea cliff.]—Where there was evidence of the user by the public of a footpath along a sea cliff for some distance when its direction continued on a line slanting inland, & during the course of some twenty years, owing to erosion by the sea, the footpath so used had receded about twenty or thirty feet inland, though the ct. was always slow to infer the dedication of a public right of way along a sea cliff, such a dedication could be here inferred, having regard to the fact that part of the footpath did not run along the sea cliff, & no objection to its user had been made by the owner of the land over which the footpath continued after leaving the sea cliff. Pltfs. having claimed that there was no public right of way over a strip of land under a portion of a fence removed by defts.:—Held: the public had wandered from the original right of way over the land of pltfs. when it was in the hands of their predecessor in title & was derelict, but the user of the new way by the public had never been acquiesced in, & there had never been a dedication of it to the public use, & pltfs.

PAIGNTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. P. 98.

322a. ——— User by sufferance.]—Deft. council claimed that there was a public footpath over ptf.'s park. On a plan attached to an inclosure award of 1816 no such public footpath was set out, & since that time down to 1901 the park had been in settlement with no one capable of dedicating a right of way to the public. The alleged footpath led from the public road over part of the carriage drive to the hall, & then turned off through the park, leading to only three farms & three or four cottages, & by its use a distance of about sixty-four yards was saved. There was no evidence of dedication, & the evidence of user was by the occupants of the farms & cottages & their friends:—Held: the proof of uninterrupted user was no more than evidence from which the ct. could infer that at some time the owner of the soil had dedicated the path to the public of which there was no evidence, & the evidence of user was user by sufferance only since 1816, before which no such public footpath was shown to exist.—FENWICK v. HUNTINGDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. P. 41.

355a. ———.]—The purchaser of land sold "subject to rights of way," after an unsuspected right of way had been established on behalf of the public, brought an action against the vendor for breach of the implied covenants expressed by his having conveyed as "beneficial owner." The vendor's covenant being qualified, the question turned upon whether there had been dedication of the right subsequently to 1782, the date of the last purchase for value by those through whom the vendor claimed. Pltf. produced two tithe maps, made respectively in 1802 & 1840, in neither of which was the right of way marked:—Held: the tithe maps were made for a special purpose, & not for the purpose of showing public or private rights other than as regards tithe; they were not, therefore, prima facie evidence enabling ptf. to contend that the dedication was at a subsequent date, so as to shift upon deft. the onus of proving that the dedication was prior to 1782.—STONEV v. EASTBOURNE RURAL COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 367; 95 L. J. Ch. 312; 135 L. T. 281; 90 J. P. 173; 70 Sol. Jo. 690; 24 L. G. R. 333, C. A.

355b. ———.]—A tithe map & award produced from the proper custody may, in cases in which the question is whether a highway was dedicated to the public before or after Mar. 20, 1836, be used in conjunction with evidence of uninterrupted public user throughout living memory as evidence,

786a. ——— Increased burden of traffic.—

A road was constructed by pltf. corp. under powers conferred by a private Act of 1875, which enacted that the road should be constructed according to a certain specification & that it should thereafter be maintained at pltf.'s expense. The road was completed in 1878 as a waterbound macadamised road in accordance with the statutory requirements, & was fully maintained by them for many years, but ultimately it deteriorated owing to the increase of traffic of a kind unknown in 1878, & unless resort was had to tar-spraying, or to some similar modern expedient, the existing traffic would rapidly destroy the road :—Held : (1) pltf's. were liable to maintain the road in the condition in which it was completed in 1878, & that liability still continued, notwithstanding the change of circumstances brought about by the increase of traffic; (2) the obligation to maintain the road rested on pltf's. alone.—*MANCHESTER CORPN. v. - 951a. ———.]—Relators were trustees of two wills, & as such owned lands abutting upon a certain road in the Metropolitan Borough of W. By notices dated Feb. 14, 1928, the trustees were required to pay to defts. two sums amounting to £1,473 11s. 2d., being the estimated expenses of making up as a new street certain portions of the road upon which their lands respectively abutted. The A.-G. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, & relators as co-pltfs. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were not "new streets" within Metropolitan Management Acts, 1855 & 1862. Defts. contended that the road in question had not been dedicated to the public before Mar. 20, 1836, & was therefore not repairable by them. Further, they said that each of the portions of the road was in fact & in law a "new street" within Metropolitan Management Acts, & that neither they nor their predecessors had at any time taken into charge or assumed the maintenance of the paving or roadway of the street of which the said portions of the road formed part:—Held: (1) on the evidence there was nothing to show that the road in question was anything else than a public highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The fact that repairs had been done by private owners for their own benefit was no evidence of any liability on their part to repair ratione tenuræ; (2) neither of the portions of road in respect of which the claim arose constituted a "new street" within Metropolitan Management Acts.—*A.-G. & PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. In 1923 the road became a main road, pltfs., S.'s successors in title to the soil through which the tunnel was driven, being the road authority. In 1924 it became necessary to repair the walls & roof of the tunnel:—Held: (1) the walls & roof of the tunnel either formed part of the highway or were necessary for its maintenance, & the costs of their repair were costs within Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 11 (2), towards which defts. were bound to make an annual payment; (2) even if S., having in 1823 tunnelled under an existing highway, became liable ratione documenti to repair the part of the tunnelled road under the highway, that liability did not descend to pltfs. under Local Govt. Act, 1888, s. 97, because pltfs. were not only S.'s successors in title but also a highway authority.—REIGATE CORPN. v. SURREY COUNTY COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 359; 97 L. J. Ch. 168; 138 L. T. 691; 92 J. of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore

1191a. — Obstruction during construction of new road.—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road

& erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, & was not watched, drove through it & fell with his car into the ravine, sustaining serious personal injury & damage to the car:—Held: the corpn. being in occupation of the land under construction as a new road, pltf. was not a trespasser upon private property, but an invitee, to whom they owed a duty to warn of any hidden danger; the unlighted fence was in the circumstances a concealed trap, & pltf. not being guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were liable to him in damages for negligence.—OLDHAM v. Pltf.'s injury was not attributable to any lack of care on her part. The city authorities had knowledge of the dangerous condition for five or six days before the accident & made no attempt to remove the danger:—Held: the city corpn. were guilty of gross negligence within Consolidated Municipal Act, 1922, s. 460 3), & were liable.—COCKERS v. o i. ——A public road crossed a stream by a bridge. There was a fence between the road & the land adjoining it, erected by the proprietors of the latter. At a point immediately adjoining the bridge there was a gap, 15 feet wide, in the fence. A pedestrian, on a dark night, mistaking this gap for the road, walked through it & fell into the stream & was drowned. In an action of damages against the proprietors of the land adjoining the road.—Held: there was no duty on such proprietors to fence a natural, as opposed to an artificially created, danger on their lands, any such duty, where it existed, falling on the road authorities.—MORRISON v. o ii. ——Defts. constructed a bridge across a navigable stream, having in it a draw or swing to enable vessels to ply on the river. There was not any gate or other protection to guard the approaches to the bridge when swung. A horse belonging to pltf. broke away from the person in charge of him, escaped out upon the public road, & ran a distance of about two miles to the bridge, reaching it while the draw was open to allow a vessel to pass, & rushing into the gap was drowned:—Held: deft. municipality could not be made answerable for the loss of the horse.—STEINHOFF v. sq. Restriction during repairs—What is sufficient warning of danger.—The duty of those making repairs upon a travelled road, is to take such reasonable care, by notice, lighting, guarding or otherwise, as may be reasonably necessary to prevent damages as the result of the temporary condition of the road. When this is done, & the condition of non-repair & of temporary danger is brought home to a person using the highway, he is called upon to use reasonable care on his part for his own safety.—WISE v. sd. Street railway track adjacent to highway.—Pltf. in a motor car attempted to cross the tracks of a street railway, which were at that point not laid upon the travelled highway but upon land owned by the city corpn. adjacent to the travelled highway. The place of crossing was in a dangerous condition, by reason of the tracks not being ballasted but simply resting upon exposed sleepers. The car was imprisoned there & run into by a street car, & pltf. were injured & the car damaged:—Held: the city corpn. were liable since, although no obligation to repair existed, there was a trap or concealed danger.—JAMES v. 1190 i. Liability for failure to light—Statutory duty to light.—A motor car driven at night came into collision with a tramway island, & was damaged. In an action against defenders, as the local authority charged, under Edinburgh Municipal & Police Act, 1879, with the lighting of the streets, it was proved that a red lamp situated on the island was not lit at the time of the accident. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance, & in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be absolved.—KEOGH v. EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES, [1926] S. C. 814.—SCOT.

r i. ——A corpn. planted trees along one of its streets, & resp. sustained injuries through his motor car colliding with one of the trees on a dark night. There was a street-lamp in the vicinity, but it had gone out:—Held: the corpn. having caused a dangerous obstruction on the street, it was its duty to light & keep lighted the obstruction, so as to make it visible to persons using the street.—OAMARU (MAYOR) v. CLARKE, [1927] N. Z. L. R. 464.—N. Z.

laying out a new road running eastwards from a certain highway & closed at its eastern end by a quickset hedge. Footpaths had already been laid out & edged with kerbstones; houses were being built on the northern side & heaps of earth & building materials made the footpath on this side impassable; the footpath on the south side was still unfinished, but was traversable; it was bounded by a fence of wooden posts & bars; the middle of the road was levelled but not metalled; across it, for laying an electric cable, defts. had cut a trench which they left unfenced & by night unlighted. They did not prevent persons, whether intending occupiers of houses or others, from walking down the new road. Pltf. on a Sept. evening, while there was still daylight, walked with a companion down the highway & into the new road along the southern footpath. Through a gap in the fence they went across other land occupied by defts. to a golf course. They returned somewhat hurriedly when it was growing dark, & pltf. fell into the trench & was injured:—Held: the trench being apparent to all, there was nothing in the nature of a concealed danger or trap, & defts were not liable to pltf., who was a mere licensee.—*COLESHILL v. so. Areas forming part of sidewalk—Left uncovered.]—On a dark night one of pltf., wife of her co-pltf., stepped into an area, one of several, in the sidewalk of a street in a town & was injured. The areas were constructed as part of a building adjacent to the sidewalk & were for the benefit of the owners or tenants of the building. No authorisation by the town corpn. for the construction of the areas was shown, but it appeared that, since the year 1900, the corpn. had looked after the coverings of the areas, treating them as part of the sidewalk. Before the accident, the area into which pltf. stepped had been covered with a plank, but on the night of the accident it was uncovered:—

Originally the top of the fireplug had been level with the pavement, but in consequence of the ordinary wearing away of the footpath the fireplug projected half an inch above of the pavement. The fireplug itself was in perfect repair. Pltff., whilst passing along the footpath, fell over the fireplug & was hurt:—Held: as the fireplug was in good repair, & had been lawfully fixed in the footpath, no action by pltf. would lie against defts.—*MOORE v. 1372a. ——— Liability of water company.—A water co., at the request & expense of the owner of a house, laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop-cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop-cock was protected by a cover or guard-box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge:—Held: the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard-box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—*CHAPMAN v. 1435a. Street traders—Licence—Application to renew—Duties of borough council.—(1) The remedy by appeal to petty sessions given by London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1927 (c. xxii.), s. 35 (2), to a street trader who is aggrieved by the refusal of the renewal of his licence as a street trader is equally beneficial, convenient & effectual as mandamus would be. Mandamus will therefore not lie to a Metropolitan borough council to compel them to hear & determine a street trader's application for renewal of a licence.

(2) In deciding such applications, the council is an administrative body, not a judicial one; it may therefore properly take into account a report of a committee, & its decision will not be invalidated merely by the fact that some members taking part in it were not present at an earlier meeting when the applicant was heard.

(3) Scmble: the Act does not contemplate the calling of evidence before the council on such applications; but the justices at petty sessions who hear an appeal can conveniently hear such evidence as may be necessary.—*R. v. The master of works lodged objections in the public interest, on the ground that, under Glasgow Police Acts, 1866 to 1924, the Dean of Guild had no jurisdiction to sanction an encroachment on a private street :—Held : nothing in these Acts deprived the Dean of Guild of jurisdiction to grant a lining for the erection of a building on a private street within the burgh.—SAXONE SHOE Co., LTD. v. Part X.—Interference with Highways under Statutory Powers.

- 1761a. Duty of local authority—On request to exercise statutory powers.]—A local authority, requested to carry out in a "street laid out but not dedicated" constructive works under its statutory powers, need not necessarily inquire into the title of those making the request. But it must, in considering whether compliance with the request will be a lawful exercise of the powers, have regard primarily to the physical conditions obtaining in the area of the proposed operations; & those physical conditions will be one of the principal factors in determining whether relevant statutory definitions are complied with. This applies to powers conferred by either public general or private local statutes.—DAVIES v. RYDON CORPN., [1928] Ch. 884; 97 L. J. Ch. 479; 139 L. T. 636; 92 J. P. 153; 26 L. G. R. 530.

- 1775a. ———.]—Defts., who owned & used traction engines for the purposes of their business, drove two of these engines on a very hot day in July over a highway belonging to plffs., who were the highway authority for the district. The highway, which had been constructed as a first class main road for the purpose of bearing traffic of all sorts, had a mephalte surface. In passing along the most exposed part of the highway, the driving wheels of these engines sank into the road at a point where the surface was very soft, with the result that the road was damaged. Plffs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover extraordinary expenses, pursuant to Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12. They also claimed damages for wrongful abuse of the highway by defts. & for nuisance & negligence.—Held : as agricultural traffic, including heavy traction engines, was admittedly part of the ordinary traffic, & the weights in the present case were normal, no claim for excessive weight or for extraordinary traffic could arise under the Act of 1878; there was no excess whatever by defts. of the lawful use of the highway & no wrongful abuse of their rights of passing & repassing; the injury to the highway was due to a peculiar & unique conjunction of heat & of atmospheric & other conditions; defts.' vehicles did not constitute a nuisance, & there was no negligence on the part of defts.—*EASTBOURNE COUNTY BOROUGH v. 1894a. — Consent of owners of land abutting on highway—Condition precedent.]—By sect. 59 of a local Act "the corp'n. may from time to time by order stop up wholly or partially any highway which in their opinion is unnecessary on such terms as to the vesting of the soil & other matters as may be agreed on between the corp'n. & the owners & lessees of buildings & lands abutting on the highway & on any highway being so stopped up all public & other rights of way & other rights in, over or upon the same shall be absolutely extinguished." 2439a. — Sale by owner—Necessity for demand on purchaser—Limitation of action.]—Defts. being a local authority having duly made a final apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 12, of the expenses of certain private street works, demanded in 1910 the amount thus apportioned from an owner of land abutting on the street thus made up. In 1927 the latter sold the land in question to pltf. without having satisfied defts.' demand, & pltf. then proceeded to erect houses on the land in respect of which he became entitled to a subsidy. Defts. thereupon claimed to set off against the subsidy the amount of their claim against the owners for the time being of the land in respect of the apportioned expenses, together with interest thereon:—Held: (1) although defts. might have lost their right to sue the original owner for the expenses they were not prevented from suing pltf. as a subsequent owner for the time being. A demand on such owner was necessary to complete the cause of action for such expenses & Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until such demand had been made; (2) on the footing that Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, was applicable, that sect. did not apply to defeat a claim against pltf., the owner for the time being, because defts. had no present right to receive the sum set off from pltf. until he became owner & twelve years from that date had not elapsed.—DENNERLEY v. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 46–50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corp'n. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment:—Held: inasmuch as the corp'n. had not resolved that the apportionment should be on any basis other than frontage, the stipendiary magistrate could not direct an apportionment on any other basis. Subject to that limitation, he must consider & determine, upon evidence, whether the proposed works were in any, & what, respect unnecessary, & must have regard to any alternative proposals, if resps. made any & supported them by evidence, & to the cost thereof.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. Part III.—Personal Rights and Obligations arising from Marriage.

595a. — Bankruptcy of husband.]—The bkpcy. of a husband who has entered into a separation deed is an answer to any claim for the payment of agreed sums under the deed, but does not convert his wife's agreement to live apart with an allowance into an agreement to live apart without maintenance. Her right to that maintenance is not in contract but is an incident of matrimonial status at common law. An agreement under a separation deed to receive an allowance merely suspends, but does not annul, that right, which revives as soon as the agreement is terminated by bkpcy., notwithstanding the receipt of a dividend. The dividend is not a transaction between | husband & wife, but an incident in the bkpcy., & its receipt does not operate as a new bargain with the husband compounding the common law right of the wife. The separation agreement thus put an end to does not debar the wife from alleging the wilful neglect of the husband to provide reasonable maintenance for her within Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925.—*DEWE v. ni. ——— Whether assignable.—A policy of assurance was effected by a husband for the benefit of his wife under Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880. There was competition between the widow & an assignee claiming under an assignment which bore to have been executed with the consent & concurrence of the wife:—Held the wife had no power to discharge the trust in her favour created by the policy, & the insurance co. ought to have known that the deed was one which the spouses were disabled from granting.—*SCOTTISH LIFE CO. v. life.]—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £288 thus became payable. The co. were unwilling to pay over this sum except on the joint receipt of the husband & wife, & ultimately paid it into ct. :—Held: (1) the policy came within sect. 11 of the above Act, & created a trust in favour of the wife in certain events; (2) insured must be taken to have exercised the option for the benefit of the trust; (3) unless the husband & wife came to an agreement, the fund must be accumulated in ct. until it could be ascertained by the death of either party who was entitled to it.—Re FLEETWOOD'S POLICY, [1926] Ch. 48; 95 L. On the trial the husband stated that when he made the conveyance to his wife he did so on her undertaking that the members of her family would vacate the house, & this was never carried out.—Held: pltf. could not succeed, as the only claim he could set up would be that he had made a conveyance for a consideration that had failed, & his action would be either for specific performance or damages.—BODY v. BODY (1924), 34 B. C. R. 315.—CAN.

2039a. ————.]—By a deed of separation reciting that differences had arisen between a husband & a wife, it was agreed that the wife should during the life of the husband live separate & apart from him & free from his marital control & authority as if she were unmarried, & that the wife should retain as her separate property certain articles which, if she should die in the lifetime of the husband without having disposed of them, should devolve as if she had died possessed thereof intestate & a widow. The husband covenanted that he would during the life of the wife pay to her an annual sum of £600. The wife was also to be entitled to certain furniture & effects for the use of herself during her life. Throughout the deed the parties were referred to as "the husband" & "the wife" respectively. It was provided that if the husband & the wife should be reconciled to each other & return to cohabitation the deed should become void. The husband subsequently committed adultery & the wife obtained a decree dissolving the marriage. He then made default in paying the full annual sum provided for by the deed, & she brought an action to recover the arrears :—Held : the deed was not subject to any implied term that it should only operate so long as the marriage relation continued to exist between the parties, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—MAY v. In respect that (a) at common law the relationship existing between husband & wife is of so intimate a character that it is against public policy that the one should have a right of action against the other in consequence of a wrong done, & (b) Married Women's Property (Scotland) Act, 1920, has not altered the law in this respect.—*HAUFER v. 2518a. —.—[A husband & wife intermarried in Feb. 1922, & continued to cohabit until July, 1927, when the wife left the husband. On Nov. 2, 1927, the wife petitioned for a divorce founded upon an act of sodomy alleged to have been committed on her by the husband in Mar. 1922, & alleged acts of cruelty consisting of (a) acts of shameful uncleanness & invitations to repeat them, & (b) ordinary acts of cruelty, such as acts of ill-temper & abuse.

At the trial the judge in summing up to the jury did not warn the jury against finding that the sodomy alleged had been committed on the uncorroborated evidence of the wife, who was an accomplice; nor did he clearly point out that before it could be held that there was cruelty as regards the sexual malpractices it must be shown that they caused danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental, or a reasonable expectation of it. The jury's verdict was that sodomy had been committed as alleged; that the husband had been guilty of cruelty of the class (a), & that he had not been guilty of cruelty of class (b). The judge then made a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage. On appeal:—Held: (1) the judge ought to have warned the jury that cogent evidence was required to overcome the presumption of innocence of sodomy, & that they should not convict on the wife's uncorroborated evidence; (2) the ct. must take notice of the fact that there had been condonation of the offence, even though the husband did not plead it; (3) the judge had misdirected the jury by saying that the sexual malpractices were cruelty in themselves, as there could not be legal cruelty without danger to life, limb, or health, physical or mental, or reasonable apprehension of it; & (4) instead of directing a new trial the ct. should dismiss the wife's petition.

(5) The wife having on the evidence been a consenting party to the act of sodomy alleged to have been committed it would be impossible for her to obtain a decree of divorce based solely on that act.

(6) The rules with regard to condonation & connivance as a bar to a decree for divorce were well established in the practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. before the Act of 1857. In 1919 applt. met D. in New York, who was living with her husband & two daughters on terms of affection & up to the date of these proceedings, continued to be on these terms with them. In Dec. 1920, with her husband's consent, she went on a big game shooting expedition to Africa with applt.; applt.'s wife consented, though against her desire. Applt. & D. were drawn together through their mutual enthusiasm for sport. An expert photographer was with them on the expedition but fell ill. Applt. & D. were away on trips with no one but natives for several days & nights together. D. was, in 1920, forty-five years of age, & there was no direct evidence of familiarity between them:—Held: there was not sufficient ground for the inference that adultery might reasonably be assumed as the result of an opportunity for its occurrence.—*ROSS v. F. Remedies (Vol. XXVII., p. 304).

Add the following case:—

2813a. Petition for judicial separation—Whether petition brought only for collateral purpose.—A wife petitioned for judicial separation from her husband, on the ground of his adultery. She needed no protection against interference from her husband, but she required orders for permanent maintenance & for custody. The judge, following his usual custom, asked petitioner why she prayed for judicial separation & not dissolution of the marriage. Petitioner stated that she did not wish her husband to marry the woman who had ruined her home:—Held: permanent maintenance & custody being, at any rate, a part of the purpose for which the suit was brought, petitioner had a right to a decree of judicial separation. The ct. had a discretion to refuse such a decree, but not an unlimited discretion, & that discretion must be exercised upon some legal ground, such as the absolute & discretionary bars & the ground that the suit was not brought bona fide, but only for some collateral purpose. It was not such a legal ground that the ct. thought it would be better that the relief to be granted should be dissolution, & not judicial separation.—BLANCHARD v. BLANCHARD (1928), 138 L. 2999a. ———.]—Under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), justices are empowered on the application of a wife to make an order containing a provision that the applicant be no longer bound to cohabit with her husband, & this provision while in force has the effect in all respects of a decree of judicial separation on the ground of cruelty. But where the wife's application is based upon a charge of desertion only, such a clause should not be inserted in the order, inasmuch as it prevents the continuance of desertion in strict law after the date of the order. In the present case the wife was granted a separation order on the ground of desertion, & the non-cohabitation clause was inserted in the order:—Held: the justices were entitled to find as they did, but were wrong in allowing the non-cohabitation clause to be included in the order. In cases of cruelty it might be necessary for the protection of the wife, but that was not so in cases of desertion; & the non-cohabitation clause was struck out.—SAYERS v. SAYERS (1929), 93 J. There was no subsequent resumption of marital relations or other change in circumstances:—Held: the husband was entitled to have the counterclaim struck out on the ground of res judicata, even if Domestic Relations Act, 1927, c. 5, s. 6 (2), which had been passed after the dismissal of the first action, had a retrospective effect.—*DAVIS v. The petition was dismissed on the ground that the suit was collusive. After the dismissal resp. & co-resp. continued to live in adultery, & petitioner, who had received the £1,750, presented a second petition against them, complaining of the adultery since the date of the former petition :—Held : petitioner had by the agreement prevented himself from complaining of any adultery whether past or future, & he had connived at the adultery of which in his second petition he complained, & the second petition must be dismissed.—(GIFFORD v. Collusion is possible in a good case, v.c. although the ct. is convinced that matrimonial misconduct was proved, yet if evidence of collusion, too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, appeared, no decree should be made.

In the present case the ct., having concluded that there was an arrangement between the parties to obtain a divorce & as to the testimony which should be offered to support the claim therefor, & that the testimony given by the resp. was in accordance with this

PART XIII. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 4.—
D. (a) ii.

3446 i. Principle on which court acts.—There is nothing in Marriage Act, 1915, s. 131 (1), to indicate that the general rule is that the discretion of the ct. should be exercised against a petitioner who has himself been guilty of adultery, or that it should only be exercised in his favour in exceptional circumstances. The discretion of the ct., on the wording of the section, is quite open. If anything, the words "would appear to indicate that ordinarily the decree nisi would be granted notwithstanding the adultery of the petitioner, but that in such a case the ct. is not bound to grant it." Under the section the ct. has an unfettered discretion, & it is neither desirable nor possible to lay down definite & rigid rules by which the ct. should be guided in all cases. The mere non-disclosure in his affidavit by a petitioner of the fact that he has during the marriage committed adultery is not a sufficient ground for refusing a decree nisi to which he would otherwise be entitled.—ADAMS v. ADAMS, [1925] V. L. R. 90; [1928] A. L. R. 89.—AUS.

3448 i. Factors governing exercise of.—When it is admitted by petitioner that he has been guilty of adultery, the ct. will exercise its discretion in his favour in a case that comes clearly within the principles laid down in Wilson v. Wilson, No. 3148 LAIRD v. LAIRD (1927), 38 B. C. R. 297.—CAN.

3448 ii. —.]—A wife who was deserted by her husband, having reason to believe he was dead, married second time. The first husband, turning up, petitioned for divorce. It appeared from the evidence that petitioner had been guilty of infraction of substantially all the matters set out in Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, s. 16, & that the wife was a very deeply injured woman without a stain on her character.—Held: although there is power to refuse petitioner a decree, the judge's discretion is left unfettered & absolute by the legislature, & it is in the best interests of the wife, in the circumstances, to be set free; the marriage will, therefore, be dissolved on condition that petitioner gives security for the maintenance of resp. in the terms of sect. 17 of the statute.—HARNIS v. HARNEY (1926), 39 B. C. R. 275.—CAN.

3448 iii. —.]—Held: even if the evidence against the pltf. justified the inference that he had committed adultery, the circumstances of the case, including the interests of pltf.'s child, warranted the ct. in exercising its judicial discretion in his favour.—WRIGHT v. 4063a. Under Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (3).—Held: (1) the effect of the above sub-sect. was not to confine the power of the ct. to make interim orders to cases in which the facts were such as would warrant the ct. in making an order in proceedings for judicial separation, but to confer on the ct. a general power to make interim orders of the same nature & class as could be made in properly instituted proceedings for judicial separation; (2) a wife found guilty of adultery in a suit for divorce brought by her husband, whose petition had been dismissed because by his conduct he conduced to her adultery, was a competent suitor for dissolution of marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery, & if she presented a petition for divorce, the ct. had jurisdiction under the above sub-sect., in its discretion, to award her alimony pendente lite; (3) as the means of the wife were insufficient to support herself & her two children, she was entitled to alimony pendente lite, although the husband had contributed nothing towards her maintenance for seven years before the institution of the suit, & she had been able in some precarious fashion to maintain herself.—*WELTON v. 4278a. ——— When appeal lies.—The principle that the ct. will provide for the wife's costs of a matrimonial suit originally arose from the fact that on her marriage her property passed to her husband, but it still obtains, though at the present day the question is whether as a litigant she has sufficient separate estate wherewith to pay the costs of a solr. The power of a registrar under Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1924, r. 91, to provide for the wife's costs is discretionary & not subject to review unless he has clearly proceeded on a basis which is wrong. He is entitled to take into consideration the capital & income of both parties & the nature & availability of it in arriving at a conclusion as to the "sufficient separate estate" of the wife within the rule. Among other matters the amount of an allowance under an existing deed of separation is a factor, although partly & primarily intended as an alimentary provision & not as a fund for defraying costs.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS, [1929] P. 114; 98 L. J. P. 40; 140 L. T. 383; 45 T. L. R. 157; 73 Sol. Jo. 77.

It was urged on behalf of petitioner that the pleadings showed that the wife had not a good ground for her defence so as to justify an order against her husband to secure her costs. In accordance with an offer made by petitioner an order was made for security to be given without payment into ct.—Re sy. Necessity for preponderance of evidence.—Effect of declaration of no intention to remarry.]—In a divorce action the rule as to the preponderance of evidence in civil actions should not be weakened, but the evidence required to establish plff.'s case should be, if anything, stronger & more preponderating than in other actions. Plff. in a divorce action who proves a case entitling him to a divorce is not prejudiced or deprived of his right to the divorce because he declares that if he gets it he does not intend to remarry.—*LEBOURIE v. 4909a. — To secure wife's costs—Undefended petition by wife—Subsequent defence on admission of adultery by wife.]—On the abandonment by a wife of her prayer in a petition for the dissolution of her marriage, which petition was originally undefended, her husband, by leave, filed an answer alleging adultery admitted by his wife as her reason for having her prayer struck out. The registrar refused to make an order for securing the wife's costs on the fact of the wife's admission being brought to his notice. At the trial of the suit on the husband's prayer the ct. granted the husband a decree nisi & made an order for the wife's costs "in the ordinary way." A difficulty arose in the interpretation of the order, inasmuch as the usual order for security had not been made:—Held: though solrs. acting for a wife must avail themselves of the rules in the divorce jurisdiction for securing payment of the wife's costs from the husband, in this case the husband, until his wife's admission of adultery, had desired the success of his wife's suit, & therefore the ct. directed, in the exercise of its discretion, that the husband must pay his wife's costs properly incurred up to service of the summons for leave to file an answer.—*GODDARD v. PART XIII. SECT. 22, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

5360 i. On dissolution of marriage—For guilt of wife.]—Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1908, s. 42, does not authorise the ct., where a decree for dissolution of marriage has been obtained by a husband against a wife, to make an order on the husband for the permanent maintenance of the wife.—HARRIS v. HARRIS, [1926] N. Z. L. R. 274.—N.Z.

5360a. On lunacy of husband.]—The jurisdiction in lunacy to appoint a receiver of the estate of a person of unsound mind does not exclude other cts. from enforcing lawful claims against his estate, including claims arising in the Divorce Div. Although the primary duty of those concerned with the care of a person of unsound mind is to apply his estate for his maintenance, & there is power under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171, to direct a settlement of the property of a lunatic or defective, the Divorce Div. is not thereby discharged from the duty of providing for the permanent maintenance of a petitioning wife out of the estate of a husband of unsound mind. When by an order in lunacy a provision has been directed for the wife during the lifetime of the husband & pending his incapacity, & the Divorce Div. approve the quantum of the order, the proper course, on application in that Div. by the wife for permanent maintenance, is to order it to be secured to her at the rate ordered in lunacy so far as the husband's means permit without prejudice to any further order in lunacy, the security not to be enforceable pending subsistence of the order in lunacy, & should it subsist during the life of the husband not to be enforceable till his death.—C. L. v. C. F. W., [1928] 2 K. B. 223; 97 L. J. P. 138.

5364a. ——— Delay.]—In allotting maintenance one of the statutory duties of the ct. is to have regard “to the conduct of the parties.” If a wife obtains a decree in an undefended case it does not necessarily follow that her conduct, for example, in the matter of delay, was approved by the trial judge. Even if the judge disapproved of the delay, he still had a discretion to pronounce the decree. In an undefended case, therefore, on allegations of unreasonable delay being made in the maintenance proceedings, sufficient evidence must be received to enable the ct. properly to determine whether the allegations are established & if so, how if at all the conduct in question would affect the sum of money which the husband should be ordered to secure &/or to pay.—*CHAPPEL v. 5382a. ———.]—Although the considerations which applied in the Ecclesiastical Cts. to awards of alimony must have due weight in determining the proper award of maintenance to a wife after a decree of divorce, the assumption of a fixed arithmetical rule & an indispensable process of applying that rule is erroneous, & disregards the duty imposed on the ct. by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1) & (2). Where the husband's whole income has been expended on the requirements of the matrimonial home, a third of his means may well be required for the wife's maintenance; but where, beyond everything called for by such requirements.

the husband possesses an ample fortune, the amount of his income affords no definite guidance as to the sum required to supply his sometime wife with the necessities, comforts, & advantages incidental to her station in life.

Where the husband's gross income was £25,337 a year, derived mainly from his interest in a business concern, the registrar by his report submitted that the husband should be ordered to secure to his wife, who had divorced him, by way of permanent maintenance for her life, the annual sum of £3,500 less tax, & to pay to his wife during their joint lives the further annual sum of £500 less tax. The ct. confirmed the report. — GILBEY v. GILBEY, [1927] P. 197; 96 L. J. P. 55; 137 L. T. 31; 43 T. L. R. 283.

5382b. ———.]—Resp., a husband, who had been divorced, re-married, & by an antenuptial settlement settled property, which included the matrimonial home & the chattels therein & the major part of his capital, on his wife in futuro. Petitioner, his former wife, had obtained an order for permanent maintenance of £100 a year & of £100 for her son, when resp.'s annual income was about £1,500. Subsequently, when resp.'s income, not taking into account the settlement, was about £4,500, petitioner applied for an increase in the amount of the order, on the ground that resp.'s means had increased. The registrar increased the order for permanent maintenance from £400 to £1,200 a year, less income tax, & from £100 to £150 a year, free of income tax, for the son:—Held: (1) resp.'s means had increased, as by sharing the advantages of the matrimonial home as of right settled upon his wife, a larger portion of the £1,500 unsettled income was left free to be dealt with by him & by the ct.; (2) the order could not be made disregarding the settlement, which subsisted; (3) an order for permanent maintenance, or an increase of it, should not be based on the income of the husband during a year of exceptional prosperity; (4) an order for permanent maintenance in such a case should not be based on the old practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. in the case of a decree a mensâ et thoro, of granting to the wife one-third of the husband's available means, as the conditions arising from the two decrees were not the same, petitioner & resp. being divorced, & free to marry again; (5) in view of the increased means of the husband, having regard to the wife's fortune, the ability of the husband & the conduct of the parties, the order for permanent maintenance for the former wife should be increased from £100 a year to £750 a year, less income tax.—*N. v. The husband had capital of at least £40,000. When each instalment of alimony became due he adopted an attitude of passive resistance, & on three successive occasions she secured payment only by execution on her husband's household effects, & on one occasion she secured a charging order on certain of his securities for the payment of a monthly instalment accrued due. Therefore she applied for an order to secure, under the control of the ct. or of a receiver, sufficient of the husband's 5791 i. Interests of children -- & parents.—A wife obtained a decree of divorce for adultery in an action which also contained a conclusion for the custody of the two pupil children of the marriage. The Lord Ordinary, regarding the question solely from the point of view of the children's welfare, awarded the custody to the father:—Held: (1) Guardianship of Infants Act, 1925 (c. 45), s. 1, recognised & proceeded upon the existence of rights & preferences in the spouses to the custody of their children, & its effect was not to abolish those rights & preferences, but to provide that they should not be enforced if the result would be adverse to the children's capital from which payments of the monthly instalments could be made to her as they became due. The judge held that owing to a defect in the matrimonial law the ct. had no power to grant the relief asked for. The summons must be dismissed, but the husband would pay the wife's costs:—Held: under the law as it now stood, the husband could not be treated as in contempt with regard to future payments, but as he was in contempt as regards past payments & had expressed an intention to disobey the order for alimony as regards future payments, the ct. while not overstepping the proper limitations with regard to future payments, would make an order restraining him from receiving any dividends in respect of investments to the extent of £395 16s. 8d., being the amount of the arrears of alimony & costs, directing that the solr. of resp. should receive the dividends & pay the same to the petitioner, & would give liberty to apply in chambers in regard to future arrears. *BURROWES v. An application was subsequently made by her to a ct. of summary jurisdiction in England under the above Act to confirm that order as against her husband who was resident in England. Upon that application no evidence was submitted to the justices on behalf of the husband. The justices confirmed the order with the modification or variation of substituting £2 10s. per week, i.e., £2 for the married woman & 10s. for the child, in lieu of £5 10s. per week, they being of opinion that they were bound to reduce the amount payable under the order to the limit prescribed for such orders made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39):—Held: (1) the justices had power to state a case for the opinion of the K. B. 6250b. ————*Time for application.]—*A complaint under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), s. 7, that a married woman has committed adultery, is subject to the six months' limitation imposed by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11.

A wife obtained an order for separation & an allowance in 1922. In 1926 justices purported to discharge the order by reason of adultery of the wife found by them to have been committed in 1915:—Held: the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction.—WALLER v. WALLER, [1927] P. 154; 96 L. J. P. 58; 136 L. T. 512; 43 T. L. R. 285; 71 Sol. Jo. 232; 28 Cox, C. C. 329, D. C.

6250d. ————*Particulars of adultery.]—*A wife had obtained an order under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, that her husband should pay her 30s. a week by way of maintenance. The order did not contain a non-cohabitation clause. Subsequently the husband took out a summons asking that the order for maintenance should be discharged, on the ground that the wife had committed adultery. The husband gave evidence that, since the date of the maintenance order, his wife had given birth to a child, & of non-access on his part. This was the only evidence of adultery. The justices found that the wife had committed adultery, & discharged the weekly order for maintenance:—Held: (1) the evidence of the husband of non-access to bastardise his child was not admissible, & the justices' order discharging the maintenance order must be set aside; (2) in proceedings under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, if there is a charge of adultery, the act or acts of adultery should be specified with particulars, if possible, of the place where, the time when, & the name of the person with whom it is alleged the adultery has been committed.—*BOSTON v. (2) A finding of adultery against a wife by justices is not conclusive, whereas a subsequent finding by a judge of the High Ct., that the adultery alleged was not committed, is conclusive. SECT. 1.—APPLICATION OF SCHEDULE (Vol. XXVIII., p. 6).

Add the following case :—

- 11a. General rule.]—(1) Income tax under Schedule A., as under every other Schedule, is assessed on profits & gains, & the test in regard to liability to tax under Schedule A. is not whether the person taxed had an independent ownership of the property, but whether he had profits & gains in respect of his occupation.

(2) A person who by a will is given a right of residence in a house rent free so long as he wishes, & who is in residence during the year of assessment, is assessable to income tax for that year under Schedule A. in respect of his beneficial occupation; & the amount at which he is assessed must be included in a return of the total income for super tax purposes in the following year.

(3) When the right of residence is given to two persons jointly, it is for the Special Comrs. to fix the proportion of the total assessment applicable to each person, & when such a finding has been made, it should be accepted in any higher ct.—*SHANKS v. *Held : (1) in accordance with 1918 Act, Schedule A., No. VII., r. 8 (c), one assessment must be made in respect of each block or building, & not a separate assessment in respect of each flat; (2) the allowance for repairs must also be made in respect of each building in accordance with Schedule A., No. V., r. 7; (3) the premises not being let at rack rent, in estimating the annual value the payments made by the owner for rates, etc., in the preceding year were to be excluded, as provided by Schedule A., No. IV., r. 1.—NORWICH UNION LIFE INSURANCE SOCIETY v. The produce grown on the land represented only about thirty per cent. of the food required for the cows. Resp. sold his milk to regular customers in the district, & only purchased milk for resale when his own supply was insufficient for his customers' ordinary requirements. He sold his cows when they became dry. The general comrs. held that resp. was not a dealer in milk, & they discharged an assessment made upon him in accordance with 1918 Act, the shares so credited should be accepted in satisfaction of the bonus. In the books of the co. each shareholder was credited with his proportion of the bonus in payment of 10s. in respect of each of the shares so allotted & issued to him:—Held: the proportion of the bonus so credited to each shareholder was “profits or bonus credited” to him within Income Tax Assessment Act, 1915–1921, s. 14 (b), & was properly included in his income.—*JAMES v. On Mar. 17, 1921, the £20,000 was paid to the co., & in anticipation of the marble being purchased in Italy, though not till the autumn of 1921, the co. at once arranged for the conversion of the greater part of the £20,000 into lire at one hundred & three to the £, & a lira account was opened. In May, 1921, the lira had appreciated in value, & as the money was not yet required by the co., their nominee, without the co.'s knowledge or authority, directed the sale of the balance of the lira account, & at seventy-two to the £ the lire realised a profit of £6,707, which was received by the co. The lire were subsequently repurchased for the purposes of the contract for £19,386, which was allowed as a deduction from the co.'s profits for income tax purposes:—Held: in computing the co.'s profits for the purposes of assessment to income tax for the year 1922-23 the £6,707 was not a profit arising out of the contract for the supply of marble, but was merely an appreciation of a temporary investment, & was not assessable to income tax as part of the profits of the co.'s trade.—*McKINLAY v. Certain foreign manufacturers refused to take licences, unless they were also given an option of purchase exercisable within a given period, & the syndicate entered into a contract with an American co. to grant them a licence to use & work the syndicate's American patents, with an option of purchase thereof. The co. having exercised its option of purchase, & paid to the syndicate a sum for the purchase of the American patents out & out, the Special Comrs. decided that profits on the sale of the patents arose in the course of the co.'s business & were chargeable to income tax:—Held: the Special Comrs. had not wrongly directed themselves, & there was ample evidence to support their conclusion of fact.—*DUCKER v. - 97b. Payments for grant of shop rights of patented invention.—Applt. was managing director of a co. engaged in the dyeing industry, & also carried on the business of selling yarn & machinery on his own account. He had invented new apparatus for dyeing which was patented in the United Kingdom & America. He exploited this invention by providing & selling the necessary machinery to firms in America, & he did not dispute that he was assessable to income tax, under Case I. of Sched. D., on the profits made on the machinery. Under the agreements made with these firms, however, in addition to the price paid for the machinery, he was entitled to further payments for grant of "shop rights," i.e. the right of the purchasers to use the machinery & processes in their own mills or within a limited area. Applt. contended that these payments were for the acquisition of an exclusive licence to use the patented processes in a limited area, that they were payment for portions of the patent rights & therefore capital payments in respect of which he was not assessable. The Special Comrs. found that the agreements were primarily for the sale of machinery & that the grant to the purchasers of "shop rights" was consequential on the sale; & therefore that the payments for the "shop rights" must be included with the payments for the machinery in the receipts of applt.'s business:—Held: the Comrs. had decided rightly on the evidence before them.—*BRANDWOOD v. He appealed against assessments to income tax made upon him under Schedule D, in respect of stallion fees, & the comrs. decided that in regard to stallion fees the expenses required to make the profits from service to mares, plus any expenses of keeping up the stud to the number of stallions earning fees should be allowed, but the number of horses to be used for replacement should not exceed one-third of those earning fees:

Held: applt. was assessable to income tax under Schedule D, in respect of profits from stallion fees, in accordance with the principle laid down by the comrs.—MARSHAL v. TWEEDY (1926), 11 Tax Cas. 524.—SCOT.

important work of purchasing all properties upon which the reef discovered by the co.'s technical advisor was found by him to exist. The co. thereupon purchased certain further properties, thereby exhausting its cash resources. Thereafter one of the co.'s directors stated that the occurrence of platinum in the properties required a large working capital, & suggested that a new powerful co. should be formed to take over the rights held by resp. co. - 114a. — “Turning over” cotton mills.]—During the boom in the Lancashire cotton trade in 1919, applt., with other persons, engaged in the operation known locally as “turning over” a cotton mill, i.e. acquiring a controlling interest in the mill, organising its administration & finances, & reselling it to a new co. The operation was successful & applt. joined other syndicates, composed partly of the same persons engaged in “turning over” three other mills. In each case a profit resulted to applt. On Mar. 24, 1923, the additional comrs. for the division in which applt. resided signed the book containing an estimated assessment upon applt. to income tax under Schedule D. for the year 1919–20. The book was not delivered to the general comrs. until Apr. 18, 1923; notice was given to applt. on May 5, 1923, & the assessment was signed by the general comrs. on Sept. 5, 1923.—Held: (1) though each adventure of “turning over” a mill, taken singly, was not a trade, but a capital transaction, yet the succession of such adventures, in each of which applt. took part, might constitute the carrying on of a trade, & the Special Comrs., on an appeal against the assessment, were not estopped by their previous decisions from reconsidering the whole of the facts, & finding that applt. was carrying on a trade, on the profits of which he was liable to income tax; (2) the assessment was made in time, having been made when it was signed by the additional comrs. within the three years allowed by 1918 Act, s. 125 (2), & the subsequent steps need not be within that time.—*PICKFORD v. The transactions were carried out by an agent who consulted with L. from time to time, but L. took no part in the negotiations for the purchase or sale of the rights. L. was assessed for the year ending Apr. 5, 1926, to income tax under Sched. D. of the Income Tax Act, 1918, in the sum of £603 10s.:—Held: as the transaction was found to be not a concern in the nature of a trade within the definition of “trade” in 1918 Act, s. 237, & as the transaction was an isolated transaction, the profits resulting were not in the nature of income, but an accretion of capital value, & the case did not fall within the words of Case VI., “annual profits or gains.” To apply Case VI. it must be in respect of something to which Sched. D. applied, something in the nature of profits or gains in contradistinction to a capital accretion.—LEEMING v. JONES (1929), 141 L. T. 472, C. A.

- 116a. Company letting out offices—Profits from contracts for services.]—A co. owning a large building let it out in parts for offices at rents, & also contracted with the tenants for heating, lighting, & cleaning:—Held: the co. could not, in addition to the assessment on the gross receipts under Sched. A., be assessed under Sched. D. on the amount of the total receipts arising from the contracts of tenancy & for services less the expenses, with a deduction of the amount of the assessment under Sched. A., & there was no legal justification for making such a deduction. The co. was assessable under Sched. D. only in respect of the profits on the contracts for services.—SALISBURY HOUSE ESTATE, LTD. v. FRY (1929), 98 L. J. K. B. 722; 141 L. T. 498; 45 T. L. R. 562, C. A.

- 131a. — — — — —.]—Applt. was employed by a British co. as general manager of their sugar estates in Demerara where he lived & where his salary was wholly earned & paid. He was in England on leave from June to Sept. 1918, & during that time the co., at his request, placed to the credit of his banking account in England £525, being an advance on account of salary falling due before Apr. 5, 1919, & an assessment to income tax was made upon him for the year 1918–19 in respect of this sum under Schedule D., Case V. His wife had been for several years, & was throughout the year 1918–19, the owner of a house in Kent, towards the upkeep of which he contributed out of other income arising in England, but since Sept. 1917, she had been mainly living with him in Demerara, the house being left unoccupied. During his stay in England in 1918, applt. lived for the most part in hotels & in fact spent only one night at the house. The Special Comrs. having decided that applt. was resident in the United Kingdom during the year ending Apr. 5, 1919, & that he had been rightly assessed to income tax in respect of the above sum as having been received in the United Kingdom during that year from an employment abroad:—Held: inasmuch as applt.'s salary was payable in Demerara, the sum credited to him in the United Kingdom must be regarded as remitted to him from abroad & as constituting income from a foreign possession chargeable under Schedule D., Case V.—*FLEMING v. A person is ordinarily resident in a country for income tax purposes, if his residence there is not casual or uncertain, but is in the ordinary course of his life.—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. st. General rule.—A partnership resides, for purposes of income tax, at the place where its real business is carried on; & the real business is carried on where the central management & control of the whole of its business actually abides. There may be two such places of residence, but the suggested second residence must not merely have a delegation of the management of some portion of the partnership business, however extensive, but a delegation of some portion of the management of the business as a whole. The question as to where the individual partners actually have their places of residence is a wholly irrelevant consideration in determining the place of residence of the firm.—MADRAS INCOME TAX COMR. v. T. S. FIRM, TANJORE AT NEGAPATAM (1927), 1 L. R. 50 Mad. 847.—IND.

A resident director of applts. had the sole conduct of the Paris business under a power of attorney. The results of the Paris business were incorporated in applts.' balance-sheets, but no part of the French profits was remitted to London:—Held: as the power of attorney did not, except as against third parties, divest the directors in London of their power of control over the French business, applts. were assessable to income tax on the whole of their profits, including those of the Paris office.—*NOBLE (B. (3) Two Dutch shipping companies owned four steamships known as the Batavier Line which traded regularly between Rotterdam & London. A Dutch firm, W. & Co., were the directors & had the management & control of both companies, & were also the shipping agents of both companies. iii. — Donations to public, social, charitable & ecclesiastical institutions.—Held: donations made to public, social, charitable & ecclesiastical institutions, at the request of friends of such institutions, as well as amounts paid in the office to casual visitors for tickets to performances, lotteries, etc., under an alleged commercial practice, with the object of benefiting appl.'s business, & not for charitable purposes, are not disbursements or expenses "wholly, exclusively & necessarily laid out or expended for the purposes of earning the income," & cannot be deducted from the profits & gains of the co. in arriving at its taxable income.—O'REILLY & BELANGER, LTD. v. MINISTER OF NATIONAL REVENUE, [1928] Exch. C. R. 61.—CAN.

iv. — Loan to experimental company.—A firm of law agents from time to time made advances to one of their clients, an experimental limited co. which had been formed to manufacture a new metal alloy. It was intended, after the business had been established, to promote a large public co., & the firm anticipated considerable legal work in this connection. The advances 217a. — Advances made to company by company's solicitors.—A firm of writers to the signet advanced money from time to time without security & without any written acknowledgment to a limited co. for which they had acted as law agents since its inception. The co. failed, & the advances were irrecoverable. On an appeal to the General Comrs. from an assessment to income tax under Sched. D. the firm claimed that the amount of the advances was a permissible deduction in ascertaining their profits & gains as writers to the signet:—Held: the loss was not a permissible deduction, as it did not represent moneys wholly & exclusively laid out or expended for the purposes of the firm's profession within r. 3 of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II.—HAGART & BURN-MURDOCH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] A. C. 386; 98 L. J. P. C. 113; 141 L. T. 97; 45 T. L. R. 338, H. L.

222a. Company—Payment to director as inducement to retire.—Held: a payment by a co. to a director in order to induce him to retire, in circumstances in which the other directors had come to the conclusion that it was essential in the interests of the co. that he should retire, was a business expense deductible from the co.'s profits for purposes of income tax.—*MITCHELL v. 224a. — — — — —]—Applt. co. was a member of the Cold Rolled Brass & Copper Asscn., an unincorporated body having as its objects the fixing of prices for goods manufactured by its members, & the provision of a common fund to be applied in the interests of its members. The common fund consisted of members' entrance fees & monthly payments proportional to output tonnage, & in the event of the Association being wound up was distributable between the members in proportion to their contributions. In 1918 the Ministry of Munitions had large surplus stocks of brass & copper & the Asscn. was specially authorised by its members to negotiate with the Ministry in regard to its disposal. As a result the Asscn. contracted to purchase the metal from the Ministry at fixed prices per ton, & this contract, & also the draft arrangement for the disposal of the metal to the Asscn.'s members, were subsequently approved by the Asscn. in general meeting. By these arrangements members were given, firstly, an option of purchasing a quantity of the metal proportional to their monthly output, at prices scheduled by the Association varying according to quality & size, & secondly, an option to apply for any residue. The whole of the metal was thus disposed of by the Association at prices higher than those paid to the Ministry, & the "profit" was carried to the common fund.

were not made by the firm as factors for the co. The co. having failed, the loans became irrecoverable, & the firm claimed to deduct the loss thus incurred in arriving at the profits of their profession for income tax purposes:—Held: the advances were not money

"wholly & exclusively laid out for purposes" of business & the deduction of them was inadmissible.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. A. & B., [1929] S. C. (H. L.) 76.—SCOT.

o v. — Cost of reconstruction of Appls. debited in their accounts the full cost of the metal purchased by them from the Asscn., & did not bring into the accounts their share in the "profit." They were assessed to income tax under Case I. of Sched. D. on the basis that they were entitled to deduct only the net cost of the metal, i.e. the full cost less their share in the "profit":—Held: applts. were able to share in the distribution of the metal only on payment of the prices scheduled by the Asscn.; their share in the "profit" was in proportion, not to the price paid, but to the quantity taken; the profit carried to the common fund could not be regarded as the individual members' profit; & in the circumstances applts. were entitled to deduct as a business expense the price paid by them to the Asscn.—CLIFFORD & SON, LTD. v. PUTTICK, CLIFFORD & SON, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 189.

224b. Subscription to guarantee fund of British Empire Exhibition.—Appls., asphalters, subscribed to the guarantee fund of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, solely, as the General Comrs. found, in the hope of obtaining preferential treatment in the allocation of contracts for asphaltting work within the exhibition grounds. They did not in fact obtain any contract at all from the exhibition authorities. Having been called upon to pay a considerable part of the amount guaranteed they sought to deduct the sum so paid from their profits assessable to income tax as a trade expense. The General Comrs. held it was an allowable deduction:—Held: the question was one of fact, & as there was evidence to support the finding of the General Comrs., their decision must be affirmed.—MORLEY v. LAWFORD & CO. (1928), 140 L. T. 125; 45 T. L. R. 30; 72 Sol. Jo. 825; 14 Tax Cas. 229, C. A.

224c. Subscription to hospital—Where employee treated.—Appls., who gave considerable subscriptions to a hospital at which their employees were frequently treated, claimed to deduct the amount of the subscriptions as a trade expense under r. 3 (a) of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D.:—Held: the question whether the subscriptions were given with the view of obtaining a staff that would earn profits, or whether they were given merely because the staff had in fact been treated at the hospital, was a question of fact for the Special Comrs., & their decision must be affirmed.—BOURNE & HOLLINGSWORTH, LTD. v. OGDEN (1929), 45 T. L. R. 222; 73 Sol. Jo. 127.

226a. Liability to bank on loans to meet acceptances—Subsequent compromise of bank's claim.—Applt., who carried on business as an exporter of cloth, habitually financed his shipments by drawing bills on the buyer in Shanghai & borrowing from a bank in London on the security of the bills & shipping documents. In 1920 a buyer became unable to meet his acceptances, & applt. found himself responsible to the bank for a large sum. In computing his assessable profits for the year ended Mar. 31, 1921, he was allowed to deduct a sum of £22,410, being the estimated amount of the bank's claim against him, but subsequently he advanced certain contentions against the bank & eventually, at the end of 1922, the bank accepted £8,000 in settlement of its claim. Applt. objected to additional assessments made in order to bring into charge the difference between the £8,000 & the £22,410 previously allowed, contending that the sums advanced by the bank were a liability for the year ended Mar. 31, 1921, & that the subsequent reduction of the debt was immaterial in determining his liability for that or any later year:—Held: applt.'s transactions with the bank constituted part of his business & that the loss incurred was a trading loss; & the computations for the purposes of income tax must be reopened & adjusted by reference to the actual amount of this loss.—*BERNHARD v. e i. — Loss on trade branch.—A trader having two branches in his trade (viz. a cloth business & a banking business) carried on both, each with borrowed capital; & as the cloth business ended in a loss, he had to close it in 1924; & all that portion of the borrowed capital which was sunk in the cloth business was lost before 1924. The trader having had to pay interest on that lost capital in 1924–25, the year of assessment, claimed deduction therefor from the assessable profits of his remaining banking business for the year 1924–25:—Held: though the branches were distinct, the trade was one, & though the lost capital was not available for use in the trade, viz. the banking business, in the year of assessment, the interest paid on it should be deducted under Indian Income Tax Act, s. 10 (2) (ii).—*ABU-NAOHALAM CHETTY v. p i. — Separate assessments under Schedules B. & D.—A farmer bred horses & cattle on a considerable scale. He used his stallions for his own horse-breeding purposes, & also earned fees by sending them on journeys for the service of other owners’ mares. In this connection he kept a reserve of stallions to replace any which might become incapacitated. All his stallions of which only a small proportion earned fees, formed part of one undivided stud. He was assessed to income tax, on the profits of his general farming business under Schedule B., & on the profits of his fee-earning stallions under Schedule D. As a method of fixing the amount of profits assessable under the latter Schedule, the comrs. determined to regard a certain number of stallions as exclusively used in earning fees, & to allow the deduction of the cost of their full upkeep & attendance, & to provide for replacements by allowing a similar deduction in respect of other stallions in the stud to the extent of one-third of the number of travelling stallions. The farmer contended that his stallion-owning business should be treated as entirely separate from his farming business, & that the whole of the expenses & losses connected with his stallions should be set against the revenue derived from them:—Held: it was primarily a question for the comrs. to determine, & no cause had been shown for disturbing their determination.—*MARSHALL v. - 307a. Accident Insurance—Mutual society.]—A mutual insurance assocn. was formed, its sole activity being the indemnity of its members, who were coal-owners, against liability for compensation in respect of fatal accidents to workmen. The members of the assocn. were the persons protected by it, every member being liable to contribute a sum not exceeding £25 in the event of a winding up. The assocn. formed a general fund by making calls upon members proportionate to the wages paid in their works for the time being, & the balance of the ordinary call fund was transferred to a reserve fund, into which any extraordinary calls were also paid. A member, on retirement, was entitled to get back in cash a proportion of his share in the above reserve fund, but, apart from this, members had no right at all to the cash in the reserve fund, though the interest accruing on the reserve fund could be used in diminution of members' calls:—Held: (1) the sums paid by the members to the assocn. were admissible deductions in computing the profits made by a member for the purpose of assessment to income tax, as the money was laid out by the respective members on a true insurance principle; (2) the surplus funds of the assocn. were not assessable to income tax, as the assocn. was mere machinery for the purpose of enabling subscribing members to insure themselves.—*THOMAS v. - 307b. Marine insurance company—Building ships—Cancellation of shipbuilding contracts.]—A marine insurance co., having entered into contracts for the building of four ships, accepted delivery of two of the ships & then, owing to a slump in the shipping trade, cancelled the contracts for the other two ships on payment of £70,000. It was contended that a new business of dealing in ships had been begun by the co., & that the £70,000 was a proper deduction in arriving at its profits:—Held: the co. was not carrying on any trade, from the profits of which the £70,000 was an admissible deduction.—DEVON MUTUAL STEAMSHIP INSURANCE ASSCN. v. OGG (1927), 13 Tax Cas. 184.

- 309a. Loss on investments—What amounts to.]—Appls.*, an insurance co., had investments in British railway stocks, & it was admitted by the Crown that any loss suffered by appls. on such investments was deductible from their profits for purposes of income tax. The result of Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), was that appls. received in exchange for their various railway holdings stocks in the four amalgamated railway cos. created by that Act. The market value of these new stocks was less than the original cost to appls. of the old stocks, & they claimed that the loss so occasioned to them should be allowed as a deduction from their profits for 1922 & 1923 in computing their income tax liability:—Held: as the effect of what had happened was that the old investments had been closed & realised, & new investments had been begun, appls. were entitled to the deduction claimed.—ROYAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. v.

313a. — Remuneration of solicitor-trustee under trust.—A solr.-trustee was empowered by clauses in the instruments creating the trusts to charge for work done by him in connection with the trusts. By agreement between himself, his co-trustees & the beneficiaries, his remuneration was calculated as a percentage of the annual income of the trust funds, which income had already been brought into charge to tax:—Held: this remuneration was chargeable to income tax against the solr. under 1918 Act, Schedule D., Case II., as his profits or earnings arising from an employment, & was not constituted of annual payments payable wholly out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19.—JONES v. WRIGHT (1927), 139 L. T. 43; 44 T. L. R. 128; 72 Sol. Jo. 86; 13 Tax Cas. 221.

317a. — — — Different holdings of War Loan.—Appl., who owned £2,350 5 per cent. War Loan inscribed in the books of the Bank of England, in June 1924 converted this holding into 4½ per cent. Conversion Loan, the interest on which was payable under deduction of income tax. Appl., however, continued throughout the year 1925–26 to hold a small amount of 5 per cent. War Loan Post Office issue, to which he had succeeded on the death of his daughter, & which he was not aware he could convert:—Held: applt. continued throughout the year 1925–26 to hold the same source of income, i.e., 5 per cent. War Loan, & under Schedule D., Case III., r. 2, he was assessable to income tax for that year in the full amount of the interest received from such War Loan in the preceding year.—TURTON v. MITCHELL (1927), 138 L. T. 365; 13 Tax Cas. 245.

317b. — — — Holdings of husband & wife.—Where applt.'s wife, who was living with him, was in receipt of £9 16s. 10d. interest of War Loan in the year preceding the year of assessment, in which year applt. held no War Loan, & applt. in the year of assessment bought War Loan from which he received interest amounting to £3,662 10s.:—Held: applt. had been in possession of the source of such interest in the previous year, & was assessable only in the sum of £9 16s. 10d. in respect of interest of War Loan.—WALKER v. HOWARD (1927), 138 L. T. 367; 13 Tax Cas. 313.
